Ambassador Returns to Consult With Cabinet on War Threats.

Germans Annoyed By Simon Speech

Chamberlain May Plead With Hitler; Fleet Masses at Sea.

By Frank Kelley.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Aug. 28—Prime Minister Chamberlain today hurriedly recalled the British ambassador in Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson, and ordered all available cabinet ministers to meet Tuesday morning. These moves were believed to have been prompted to worry about the hostile reaction in Germany to Sir John Simon's warning that a Nazi move against Czechoslovakia might unleash a second world war.

With instructions to report in detail on the German state of mind, Sir Nevile left Berlin by airplane this morning and arrived at Croydon Airport a few hours later. His visit was kept secret from officials at the landing field and no one met him.

Henderson will confer tomorrow with the Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, and Simon, whose speech yesterday at Lanark, Scotland, it was feared might provoke Chancellor Hitler to a rash act despite the odds against him.

Cabinet to Hear Envoy.

Chamberlain will take the unusual step of having Henderson attend Tuesday's session of the cabinet members to give first-hand impressions of the feeling in Berlin. Halifax and Simon will attend and also in the envoys' audience will be the three men who are responsible for keeping Britain's war machinery oiled and ready for action—Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, who is due back from a Baltic cruise tomorrow; Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary of State for War, and Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Minister.

The only absentees are expected to be Viscount Hailsham, Lord President of the Council, who is away on a cruise, and Lord Stanley, Dominions secretary, now in Canada.

Chamberlain and his aides want to know whether there is any use making further moves to ease the tension between Berlin and Prague. They also hope to have from Henderson some indication of the spirit surrounding the preparations for Nazi Party rally at Nuremberg next week, and more precise information about the increase in Germany military "maneuvers."

Message to Hitler Hinted.

It was suggested in informed quarters tonight that when Henderson returns to Berlin late Tuesday or Wednesday he may take along a personal message from Chamberlain to Hitler. A more formal communication to the German government may be decided upon by the cabinet ministers. In this, it was be-

Highlights of News in Europe

Lord Runciman, British mediator in the Czechoslovak minority crisis, warned Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German party leader, that Europe was on the brink of war and urged Henlein to agree immediately to concessions in the Sudeten demands in order to preserve peace.

HUGH WILSON.

NEVILE HENDERSON.

British Premier Chamberlain recalled for consultation Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, and called a cabinet meeting for tomorrow at which the Czechoslovak crisis will be discussed.

Hugh Wilson, United States Ambassador to Berlin, flew to Paris to confer with Ambassador Bullitt on the Czechoslovak crisis. Wilson recently visited Czechoslovakia and conferred with Lord Runciman.

France mobilized her army for "maneuvers" on the German and Italian frontiers. Twenty thousand troops were ordered to the German border and a division to the Italian frontier.

Germany's Roman Catholic hierarchy in a letter read from church pulpits defied efforts to destroy the church and uproot Christianity in general.

Sudeten Leader's Aide Declares Party Will Insist on Rights.

By the United Press.

Prague (Monday), Aug. 29.—Viscount Runciman, British neutral mediator in the Czechoslovak minority crisis, was revealed early today to have warned Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German party leader, that all Europe is tottering on the brink of war and that he should agree immediately to concessions in the Sudeten autonomy demands in order to preserve peace.

Lord Runciman, acting on secret new instructions from London, met the "Czechoslovak Hitler" Sunday in a secretly arranged conference in the seclusion of the hunting lodge of Prince Clary Aldringen at Teplitz-Schoenau near the German frontier. Henlien, in response to a message from Runcimen, had hurriedly left a nearby Sudeten rally.

Frank T. A. Ashton-Gwatkin, expert of the British foreign office and a member of the Runciman mission, who returned to Prague from London Saturday, attended the meeting.

Appeal Probably Futile.

Runciman appealed to Henlein to abandon some of his eight-point Carlsbad demands as a contribution to appeasement of a critical international situation.

Unless the Sudeten German minority makes concessions approaching those offered by the Prague government last week, Runciman was said to have warned, war may be inevitable.

There were grave doubts, however, whether the British mediator's appeal would produce results.

While Runciman and Henlein were in conference, Sudeten Deputy Karl H. Frank—taking Henlein's place as speaker at a Sudeten beer hops festival—announced flatly that a compromise with the government was "impossible."

"Recently," he told the crowd of Sudeten Germans, "there have been important discussions, but we have decided that we cannot give up any one of our rights, which have been given to us by God.

"We will struggle on and we will attain our goal."

As Runciman and Henlein talked there were reports of new Czech-Sudeten clashes, including one arising from an alleged insult to a German barmaid by a Czech soldier, and Sudeten leaders complained that Henlein was booed by Czech solders at Fohlen as he was en route to the conference with the British mediator.

Czech Offer Unsatisfactory.

Runciman returned to Prague immediately after the meeting, supposedly to communicate with London, while Henlein remained in conference with Frank and other Sudeten leaders.

Frank, who referred to Henlein as "Fuehrer Henlein," said the "final phase" of very important development would start soon.

Ashton-Gwatkin was understood to have brought from London instructions from Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax on a new means of attempting to restore negotiations between the Sudetens and the Prague government.

Runciman had sent word to his government, through Ashton-Gwatkin, that despite Prague's new offer of a basis of negotiations containing "maximum concessions" there was grave doubt whether the government would go far enough in meeting the Sudeten demands to break the deadlock.

Yesterday's meeting was believed to have a direct bearing on reports

Green to Ask Court to Void C.I.O. Miners' Harlan Pact

Contract Is Called 'Brazen Alliance'

Agreement Is Ratified, Ending Bloody Strife in Kentucky.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 28.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, charged the National Labor Relations Board today with a part in a "conspiracy" to violate the Wagner act for its reported sanction of an agreement signed by the Committee for Industrial Organization's United Mine Workers Union and the Harlan County (Ky.) Coal Operators Association.

Denouncing the agreement as a "brazen and unlawful alliance" because he said it denied the rival Progressive Miners of America (A. F. L.) their right under the Wagner act to organize in "bloody Harlan County," Green said:

"This deal is with the approval of the National Labor Relations Board."

He amplified the remark by saying, "the board is a party to an action which violates the Wagner Act."

At the same time, Philip G. Phillips, regional director at Cincinnati of the National Labor Relations Board, said there today the agreement did not call for a closed shop.

Will Institute Court Action.

"For the first time in their existence Harlan County workers may join any union to which they would want to belong, whether American Federation of Labor or Committee for Industrial Organization," Phillips said.

[Green announced still later, the United Press reported, that he would institute legal proceedings against both the C. I. O. and the National Labor Relations Board to break the Harlan agreement.—Editor's note.]

In his statement Green hit at C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis and asserted Lewis was using government agencies to recruit members for his mine workers organization.

Might Not Seek Retrial.

"A clearer case of conspiracy to violate the national labor relations act cannot be found. A more brazen and unlawful alliance to control workers without their knowledge and consent has yet to be disclosed. A more decisive instance of John L. Lewis using Government machinery in violation of law to recruit members and break resistance to his will has never been presented to the public."

The signing of the United Mine Workers agreement with the Harlan operator, announced yesterday, followed unsuccessful attempts by the Justice Department to prosecute a group of companies and operators in Harlan County for allegedly conspiring to prevent unionization of coal field workers. President 'Invades' Md. In Speech Labor Day; Radcliffe Deserts Him

Will Accompany Lewis to Eastern Shore, Tydings' Stronghold; Colleague, Close Friend of President, Appeals for Defeat of 'Purge.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt, who has read Senator Tydings of Maryland out of the Democratic Party, will make a Labor Day speech in the Free State, it was announced today.

NICE. Invited the President.

He will speak at Denton, on Maryland's Eastern Shore, regarded up until now as pro-Tydings territory. The President will make part of the journey on the yacht Potomac, and with him as his guest will be Representative Lewis, the New Deal choice in Maryland's senatorial primary, who has denounced Tydings as a "tory Republican."

Traveling with the President also will be Representative Goldsborough, who lives in Denton, and Gov. Harry Nice, Republican Governor of Maryland.

It was said here that Gov. Nice had telegraphed the President that if he came into Maryland he would like to have him inspect the Maryland Road Commission's plan for a bridge across the lower Potomac, connecting Morgantown, Md., and Dahlgren, Va. Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, replied that the Chief Executive would be

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—Senator Radcliffe, close friend of President Roosevelt, struck a blow here tonight for his beleaguered colleague, Senator Tydings, saying that Maryland Democrats would never "surrender to anyone" the right to select their own standard-bearers.

RADCLIFFE. Friend of the President.

He went on the air a few minutes after word was received that President Roosevelt was to go all the way in his purge war on Tydings.

Tydings was in his headquarters when newspapermen notified him that the President would make a Labor Day speech in Denton.

"Denton?" he said. "That's Goldsborough's town, isn't it. Well, I hope he praises the C. I. O."

Representative Alan Goldsborough, a power on Eastern Maryland's shore, had announced last week that he was observing a hands-off policy with respect to Tydings' battle with Representative Lewis, Roosevelt-backed candidate for the Senate. Tydings did not know yesterday that Goldsborough had invited the President to Den-

Nazis Attack Christianity, Bishops Say

Catholic Hierarchy Raps 'Efforts to Destroy the Church.'

Defiant Letters Read in Pulpits of Germany Predict Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Germany's Roman Catholic hierarchy, in a long, defiant letter read from church pulpits, today bitterly indicted what it called efforts to destroy the church and uproot Christianity in general.

The Nazis were not mentioned, but no one doubted they were the targets of the attack.

The letter was formulated at a recent conference of bishops at Fulda and charged an intention to crowd out of the public eye everything conformable to confession of faith.

"The fate of the catacombs is intended for us," it said, "which is meant to be the beginning of the end."

The bishops recalled the church had outlasted all strife for 2,000 years and prophesied it would endure.

They appealed for cessation of the "battle against Christendom, because this very strife is causing a deep rift among the German people."

Bishop's Exile Cited.

The statement charged that "Weltanschauliche" (philosophical view of life) conflict was continuing within and without the boundaries of the "Old Reich" by concealed, as well as open, methods.

"Various experiences," it said, "enable us to establish that attacks in no way have become more temperate or more bearable, but rather much more hostile and violent as well as evident.

"These attacks strive after hindrance and the sucking away of the life blood of the Catholic Church, destruction of the church among the people, uprooting of Christianity in general and the introduction of a faith which no longer has the slightest to do with belief in God and the hereafter."

The letter declared the nature of these hindrances has caused thousands of Catholics to ask whether they still are "citizens with equal right notwithstanding their avowal of the common weal and fidelity to the state."

Charge Pope's Honor Attacked.

It then referred to the case of Bishop Johann Sproll, who was expelled from Wurtemberg after his refusal to leave his see voluntarily.

His expulsion was announced last Thursday. The grounds, it was said, were that the bishop was the only citizen in his diocese who refused to vote April 10 in the plebiscite on the union of Austria and Germany.

The letter said "unparalleled, ugly, concentric attacks and outrages" were used against the bishop.

"German bishops," it continued, "are compelled to fear that within a definite period of time they will be submitted to such systematcally exerted measures."

Assailing unnamed personalities for attacking in "a damaging manner" the personal honor of Pope Pius, the letter said, "we German bishops stand behind him all the more closely and faithfully when he suffers for our sake."

Hurricane Strikes Mexican Coast 160 Miles Below Texas

Brownsville, Tex., Aug. 28 (U.P.).—The Weather Bureau reported today a tropical hurricane moving across the Gulf of Mexico from Yucatan had struck the Mexican coast approximately 150 miles south of Brownsville with a 49-mile wind at Tampico, Mexico.

No loss of life or serious damage was reported. Contradictory reports that the storm was still hovering along the coast caused the Pan American Airlines to delay their schedules south.

The storm conditions brought heavy rains to the southern portion of the Texas coast, almost 2 inches.

St. Louis Boys Swim 72 Miles to Get Job

Chester, Ill., Aug. 28 (AP).—Frankly hopeful of attracting an employer, two jobless St Louis youths swam 72 miles down the Mississippi River, leaving the stream 3 miles north of here today, 24½ hours after their start.

The two, Irvin Unger, 21, and Walter Ellerbrock, jr., 19, had previously swum from Alton, Ill., to St. Louis—23 miles—in seven hours as practice.

French Army Reinforced on Two Frontiers

20,000 Troops Bivouacked on German Border; One Division Near Italy.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 28.—France moved troops into position on her eastern frontiers facing Germany and Italy today for maneuvers amid a situation widely feared as a grave threat to European peace.

More than 20,000 men—including an infatnry division and cavalry, artillery, tank and air force units—pitched camp near the junction of the French, German and Swiss borders for war games to begin Tuesday.

Maneuvers of the Second Senegales Colonial Division were ordered to begin the same day at Aups, near the Italian frontier.

Cabinet Summoned.

Premier Daladier called meetings of his "national defense" cabinet for tomorrow and Tuesday to carry out his plan for dropping the 40-hour work week in order to step up production in war industries.

The French troop movements were on a smaller scale than those across the frontier in Germany. Usually well-informed quarters said the French general staff, however, was planning to continue the maneuvers as long as Germany keeps her forces on a war footing.

This would be in line with the government's policy of military preparedness to back up pledges such as its mutual assistance pact with Czechoslovakia.

Continuous "Attack" Ordered.

Abandoning the usual set theme of attack and counterattack for the maneuvers, the army command ordered constant attack until a halt is called in the mock warfare September 2.

This plan would give the French troops exceptional mobility.

By coincidence, the new games were called just southwest of Isola, on the French-Italian border, where a new dispute developed with Rome.

French residents of Isola, farming land on the Italian side of the border, protested to local authorities against an Italian military order commanding them to abandon their holdings by Monday on pain of mil-

Wilson Leaves Berlin to Talk With Bullitt

U. S. Ambassador to Reich En Route to Paris Conference.

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Aug. 28.—Tension over the German-Czechoslovak issue continued in Berlin tonight as full repercussions of the speech yesterday in Scotland by Sir John Simon, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, were awaited.

Comments in today's newspapers revealed the anger aroused in official quarters by the British spokesman's repetition of his government's warning that a German attack on Czechoslovakia might lead to another world war involving Great Britain. However, with Wilhelmstrasse offices closed for the week-end, no wholly official statement has been forthcoming.

A stir was caused in diplomatic circles when it was disclosed that Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, flew to London as the result of a summons from Whitehall. It was said to be the first occasion on which the British envoy had resorted to an airplane.

Hugh R. Wilson, American Ambassador to Germany, also left Berlin yesterday, en route to Paris, intending, it was believed, to confer with William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, on the European situation.

The official German news agency announced tonight that, in the course of his tour of northwestern Germany to witness the army maneuvers, Hitler was being greeted with "jubilation" by the troops and the local populace.

Italy Warns Pope On 'Interference'

Cremona, Italy, Aug. 28 (AP).—Regime Fascista, the newspaper which represents an extremist wing of the Fascist Party, warned the Catholic Church today not to interfere in "political" questions.

The warning followed yesterday's report in L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, quoting Pope Pius as saying "racialist" doctrines were within the scope of religion, although the Fascist Party press has taken the contrary stand.

Jewish Refugees From Reich Enter U. S. at 100-a-Day Rate

By the Associated Press.

The flow of German political refugees to the United States under the Roosevelt-Hull policy of aiding emigres has started at the rate of nearly 100 a day.

Dispatches reaching here say the American Embassy in Berlin is not accepting any more applications from German (including former Austrian) Jews, and has enough on hand to fill available immigration quotas for almost two years.

The first groups of refugees are now reaching American shores. They are arriving almost penniless but are being received by Jewish charitable organizations and Jewish families.

The legal stipulation that immigrants cannot enter America if they are likely to become public charges is being met, officials said, by assurances that the Jewish associations and families will keep the refugees from being thrown upon the public.

Affidavits promising support are being sent in large numbers by Jewish families, particularly in the East, to the American Embassy in Berlin and the Consulate-General in Vienna.

The law limits the number of German-Jews admitted to the United States to an annual quota of 27,370. Not more than 10 per cent of the total can be admitted in any one month. So far the 10 per cent is being filled.

At present German Jews leaving Germany may take only 8 per cent of their wealth, and some say it is almost impossible to take even this.

Negotiators hope to induce Germany to let them take up to 50 per cent, although various taxes would reduce this materially.

President Sees South Carolina Race Clarified

Hints Brown's Withdrawal Leaves Voters No Doubt on Whom to Elect.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt said today that withdrawal of Edgar A. Brown from the South Carolina senatorial race "clarifies the issue" and gives the voters a choice "between two candidates representing entirely different schools of thought."

Discussing the South Carolina situation in response to questions by newspapermen, the President said the voters of that State have the responsibility of "selecting a representative in the United States Senate to play a part in the forming of legislation to carry out the objectives of the Administration's program."

Senator Smith, who has opposed many Administration measures, seeks renomination in the South Carolina primary Tuesday. He is opposed by Gov. Olin D. Johnston, who already has received a gesture of friendliness from the President.

Mr. Roosevelt's statement follows:

"In my opinion the unexpected withdrawal of State Senator Edgar A. Brown from the senatorial race almost on the eve of the primary elections in South Carolina, clarifies the issue. The voters of the State now have their choice between two candidates representing entirely different political schools of thought.

"The other thinks in terms of 1938, and 1948 and 1958 as well.

"On Tuesday the electorate of South Carolina will make this choice. On them rests the responsibility of selecting a representative

Col. Roosevelt For O'Connor In G.O.P. Race

New Deal 'Traitor' Merits Republican Votes 'as a Patriot,' He Says.

By the United Press.

New York, Aug. 28.—Support of John J. O'Connor, Democratic incumbent, for the Republican nomination to Congress from the Sixteenth New York District, by Col. Theodore Roosevelt was announced today by Louis D. Hopkins, Republican campaign manager for O'Connor.

O'Connor has been termed a "traitor" to the New Deal by President Roosevelt and now is seeking both Republican and Democratic primary nominations.

Other candidates are Allen W. Dulles, "regular" Republican candidate, and James H. Fay, seeking the Democratic and American Labor Party nominations.

Col. Roosevelt's indorsement was in the form of this letter to O'Connor:

"My Dear Congressman O'Connor: I want to take this opportunity to tell you how strongly I am behind you in the battle you are waging. You have done what every public servant should do, and what unfortunately too few do, namely acted as your conscience dictated in the interests of the American people.

"Because this is what you have done, because you refused to be a rubber stamp for the President, you have been singled out for martyrdom.

"If the American people have the stuff in them that made us a democracy, they will return you with flying colors. I hope you will receive the Republican indorsement. You merit it as a patriot. Good luck. (Signed) Theodore Roosevelt."

John Roosevelt Starts Job Today As Clerk at $18

Boston, Aug. 28 (AP).—John A. Roosevelt, the President's youngest son, will begin his business career tomorrow as a stock clerk in Filene's department store. His salary—$18 a week.

His carefree college days at Harvard and a honeymoon in Bermuda with his bride of two months just memories, lanky, smiling John will punch a time clock no later than 9:20 a. m. after he enters the store through the employes' entrance.

Throughout the day, he will push trucks of merchandise about the store to replenish stocks.

There will be an hour off at lunch time, but that won't be long enough for him to travel to neighboring Brookline where he and his wife, the former Anne Lindsay Clark, have rented an apartment in a building where rents average $100 a month.

Two evenings a week will be spent at the store, too, attending classes in advertising, which John has said he desires to make his life work. Classes will begin in September.

John has emphasized to the store management that he did not expect and did not want any special privileges because of his father's position.

U. A. W. Officers Defy Lewis, Seek to Halt Dues to C. I. O.

By the Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Aug. 28.—The regional conference of officers of the United Automobile Workers Union's locals adopted a resolution today asking the international executive board to discontinue per capita payments to the Committee on Industrial Organization.

The U. A. W. has been voluntarily contributing five cents per member per month.

The action came after a stormy closed session here of executive officers of 51 U. A. W. locals in Wisconsin, Minnesota and northern Illinois, in which defiance to the leadership of John L. Lewis in his attempt to patch up the faction-ridden U. A. W. was voted.

George B. Kiebler, president of the first district U. A. W. Council, said officers of the ninth U. A. W. region (cotermed the council, since the council comprises the entire region) passed a resolution condemning the peace letter sent by Lewis to U. A. W. locals.

Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W., was quoted as saying:

"I will not turn over the international U. A. W. to John L. Lewis."

Physical clashes and near riots attended the meeting as 350 members of the suspended Allis-Chalmers U. A. W. local besieged the club, flaunted President Harold Christoffel on their shoulders, and attempted to prevent Martin sympathizers from entry.

The U. A. W. strife has arisen from Martin's ouster of five international officers. Lewis proposed a five-point plan, the nub of which is, reportedly, the tentative reinstatement of the five, pending the next convention.

Md. Farmer Found Shot to Death in His Turnip Patch

Milton Miles, 29-year-old farmer of near Fairland, Md., was found mysteriously shot to death in a turnip patch not far from his home last night.

The bullet from a small caliber pistol or rifle had entered his right chest and punctured his right lung. His body was found crumpled face down among the plants he had gone out to thin some hours before.

Discovery of the body was made by someone from his farm, who was not identified immediately by Montgomery County police.

Relatives said when the young farmer left the house to thin the turnips he carried no weapon of any kind with him.

Supreme Court Control Is Held Slap at Liberty

Vandenberg Says There Is Shadow of Communism and Fascism.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Ledge, Mich., Aug. 28.—Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, warned here today any attempt to subject the Supreme Court to political controls would be a potential blow at religious liberty.

In an address prepared for delivered before the Michigan Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, the senior Michigan Senator asserted that "when the spirit of the Constitution dies religious freedom perishes."

"You have just one warrant for religious freedom," he said. "An inviolate Constitution and an inviolate Supreme Court to give it voice. One is impotent without the other."

Recalls Court Bill.

Turning back to the hotly disputed Supreme Court reorganization bill of 1937, Vandenberg warned that "any effort to submit this court to political controls; to make it submissive to the temporary gales of passion which periodically sweep every nation; to rob it of its supreme Constitutional jurisdiction; any such effort—no matter how nobly meditated or how persuasively argued—any such effort is a potential blow at all liberties, emphatically including religious liberty—and any failure of our people to resist all such efforts, no matter how plausibly urged, is freedom's suicide.

"There would be nothing about an American dictatorship which would be any more tolerant and benign than any other tyranny," Vandenberg said. "Indeed the sinister word 'purge'—in another aspect—already has significantly swept into our own contemporary lexicon."

Nation "Needs Understanding."

The Nation, he said, "needs to renew its understanding that there are things far more important than cash registers, trade balances, cash from Washington and purchased elections."

"It is all very well to slip and slide along toward a collectivist state in which a paternal Government promises a new degree of material security in return for a less degree of personal liberty," the Senator remarked, "but those who try to trade liberty for security usually wind up by losing both."

"Ceases to Be Citizen."

"We are nearer today to 'government by executive decree' and by bureaucratic mandates that reach intimately into the lives and livelihoods of our people than ever before," he said. "I do not now question motives. I only register trends.

"The character of the American people themselves is threatened by a corresponding drift away from self-reliance. Where they once ruggedly looked to their own resources they now look to Washington. It is no longer a case of the people supporting the Government; too often it is a case of the Government supporting the people. This ultimately means that the citizen ceases to be a citizen in the traditional American sense. He becomes a subject of the state. He gets liberty only by royal permission."

The Senator concluded by calling for "a spiritual renaissance," a revival of "the spirit of applied Christianity, the spirit of applied Constitutionalism, the spirit of traditional Americanism."

Basin Project Approved To Water 'Dust Bowl'

C. W. Kitchen, acting chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, announced yesterday authorization of a $584,500 water conservation project in Hartley and Dallam counties, Tex., 2 miles southeast of Dalhart.

The bureau described the authorization as the first step toward realization of a comprehensive plan of water utilization for the Rita Blanca drainage basin, 1,400 square miles in Colfax and Union counties, N. President Plans Purge Speech In Tydings Domain Labor Day glad to inspect the site the next week-end.

Roosevelt

President Roosevelt decided to make a Labor Day speech at Denton on the suggestion of Representative Goldsborough, who previously had been invited on the yachting trip.

Goldsborough's telegram to McIntyre follows:

"Kindly thank the President for his kind invitation to be his guest on the U. S. S. Potomac next Sunday night, and say that I accept the invitation with great pleasure.

"I wonder if the President would like to stop at Crisfield on his way back to Washington from his trip down the Bay, go up the Eastern Shore as far as my home town of Denton and make a Labor Day speech.

"Every Eastern Shoreman would welcome him with open arms, and the shore and my home county of Caroline and home town of Denton would indeed be greatly honored. In the name of all the people of the Eastern Shore, I extend to him the heartiest invitation."

Message to Lewis.

Secretary McIntyre sent the following telegram to Representative Lewis:

"The President finds that it will be possible for him to accept the cordial invitation extended by the Governor, you and others to inspect the proposed site of the Potomac River Bridge during his week-end cruise on which he is counting on you to accompany him.

"The President's plans provide for his reaching the site Sunday. Then he will board the Potomac for a cruise down the bay. Monday he expects to land at Crisfield and motor up the Eastern Shore to Denton, where he will speak."

Due Here Tuesday.

President Roosevelt made plans to leave his summer home here tomorrow night, arriving in Washington by special train Tuesday morning. However, he will be back September 6 or 7 for an indefinite stay. The Maryland primary will take place September 12.

The President spent a quiet Sunday with members of his family. This morning he attended services at St. James' Episcopal Church, and in the afternoon drove through his estate.

Lewis on Air.

Representative Lewis last night charged that Senator Tydings has consistently voted against the interests of Maryland farmers, citing his opposition to the AAA, Soil Conservation Act, Commodity Exchange Act and 1938 Farm Bill.

In what he described as "a very personal talk," broadcast from Salisbury, Md., Lewis attacked his opponent for deliberate efforts at "muddying up the political waters."

"He raises the religious issue in the Catholic areas of southern Maryland," Lewis said, "and tries to give the impression that I am anti-Catholic because I favored the appointment of Justice Black to the Supreme Court. But he does not raise this issue on the Eastern Shore. On the Eastern Shore, Mr. Tydings charges me with being backed by the C. I. O., but carefully refrains from raising this in the City of Baltimore."

The Senator also attempted to identify him with John L. Lewis, the Representative contended, "while on Friday night he brought in the name of Joe Louis and compared him with the President."

Invited on Cruise.

The New Deal candidate announced receipt of a telegram from Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President, informing him that Mr. Roosevelt would inspect the proposed site of the Potomac River Bridge during a week-end cruise "on which he is counting on you to accompany him."

Denying charges that his campaign has received financial backing from the C. I. O., Lewis asserted that "great corporations in New York have poured money into Maryland to re-elect their close friend and servant to the Senate. Yet, while accepting these funds, Tydings calls the President of the United States a carpet-bagger and objects to his entering a State which twice gave him the biggest electoral majorities in recent history."

'Gradual' Recovery Here, Roper Finds

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Business recovery definitely is in progress, Secretary of Commerce Roper said last night.

He found reports to his department—the most authentic barometer of business—reveal many encouraging factors, including a more optimistic outlook by industrial leaders who are reporting "gradual improvement."

Berry Wanted WPA Control, Hopkins Says

Senator's Accusations Held Result of His Failure to Get Patronage.

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, denying charges by Senator Berry (Democrat), of Tennessee, of illegal political activity in Tennessee's Works Progress Administration, told a Senate committee yesterday Berry made the accusations after he had tried and failed to obtain control of the State's WPA personnel.

In a letter to Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, of the committee investigating Senatorial campaign expenditures, the WPA administrator said Berry began trying to get appointees of his own choosing placed in charge of the relief organization immediately after his appointment to the Senate.

Last week the Senator wrote the Campaign Funds Committee that two WPA officials in Tennessee were in fact, but not in name, the campaign directors" of the forces which defeated him for renomination in the State's Democratic primary.

Charged Levy on Workers.

Berry did not name the officials, but reported it "had been said" that they raised a campaign fund of $125,000 by assessments and collections from WPA personnel and relief workers.

As evidence of what he characterized as Berry's "demand that we turn over the Works Progress Administration in Tennessee . . . to him," Hopkins quoted this paragraph from a letter he said Berry wrote to Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee:

"In the matter of Federal appointments which are regarded as the State-at-large appointments embodying such positions as the collector of Internal Revenue, State manager WPA, State manager PWA, State manager HOLC, State manager FHA, State manager RFC and the manager of the Government Soldiers' Home at Johnson City, you as the senior Senator to select the first, I to select the second, you to have the third and so on, until all appointments are completed, and those who are associated with these posts to likewise come within the purview of this arrangement—I agree to support your nominees and you to support my nominees."

McKellar "naturally" did not agree, Hopkins added.

Leader Denies Accusation.

Hopkins said Berry later requested specifically that George Dempster be appointed assistant works progress administrator in Tennessee in place of Rhoton Clift.

He conceded that Harry S. Berry, Tennessee State WPA administrator, and Clift probably had their preferences as to candidates in the recent primary but asserted "there is no evidence that they did exert any influence on employes of the WPA."

As to the charge they had levied political assessments on the relief workers, Hopkins said he had received from the State Administrator an "unequivocal denial" and an offer to "gladly testify to this fact under oath . . ."

Concerning Berry's charge of an abnormal increase in WPA employment just before the primary, Hopkins said the answer to that "inferential insinuation of skullduggery" was simply that the WPA was confronted "not with a political exigency but with the pressing problem of meeting the pressing need of jobless, hungry human beings."

Radcliffe Goes to Tydings' Aid In Open Break With Roosevelt

Tydings

There was speculation here tonight as to whether Tydings, like Senator George, of Georgia, would arrange to be present when Roosevelt praises his rival. The President has called him a "betrayer" of the New Deal, but has never had the chance to add a "God bless you."

The President, according to word from Hyde Park, will visit both southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore over the week-end. If his visits have the effect Lewis supporters hope they will have, Tydings will lose the primary fight on September 12.

Shore Tydings' Best Hope.

The Tydings strategists, in all their victory calculations, have counted on the Senator carrying southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore. Everything has indicated that he was strong in both sections.

On the Eastern Shore Tydings has assailed John L. Lewis and C. I. O. He has said that "a vote for David J. Lewis is a vote for John L. Lewis." There was good political reasoning behind this attack.

There has been considerable turmoil on the Eastern Shore as a result of C. I. O. organizing efforts. A C. I. O. organizer who tried to organize the crab pickers in Crisfield was run out of town and his automobile burned.

Will Visit Crisfield.

President Roosevelt, according to the Hyde Park announcement, will visit Crisfield, and with him will be "Little Davey" Lewis.

Senator Radcliffe, himself a native of the Eastern Shore and a friend of President Roosevelt since the latter was a young assistant secretary of the Navy, said in his radio speech that the Democratic Party always had been tolerant of honest differences of opinion.

"Let us not sponsor repressive measures by throttling freedom of speech," he said. "Let us not adopt the policy of trying to punish those who express doubts whenever such misgivings emerge from thoughtful minds. Let us continue to believe that the Democratic Party welcomes frank discussions and even differences of opinions within it's ranks."

"A party to grow in a healthy manner must encourage freedom of debate and action within it's ranks."

Radcliffe, who joined with Tydings in opposing Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization bill, recalled that Tydings voted against many more Administration measures in the President's first term than he has in the second.

Nevertheless, he said, in the 1936 campaign Tydings was asked to speak for the Roosevelt-Garner ticket in the various States.

"He did so," Radcliffe said. "The Democratic Committee had felt that, although Senator Tydings had opposed some Administration measures, he was a suitable and very desirable one to urge the re-election of Roosevelt and Garner—probably more desirable because he had been at times a critic of the Administration."

Urges Tydings' Re-election.

Radcliffe, using the argument that President Roosevelt used in urging the re-election of Senator Barkley in Kentucky, said:

"Twelve years' service in the Senate finds Senator Tydings still comparatively young and full of pep and vigor. His position by reason of this long experience and because of his standing through seniority gives a steadily increasing value to his opportunities for usefulness to the people of Maryland."

Praising Tydings' record in the Senate, Radcliffe called on Marylanders to support him for re-election whether or not they approved of "all" his views.

"I do not have to tell you," he said, "that the discretion as to who will be the next Democratic nominee for the United States Senate from Maryland is with you Democratic men and women of this State, and with you only.

Urges Free Will Kept.

"According to the best of Maryland precedents and traditions it could not lie elsewhere. We stand here on historic ground. The Democrats of Maryland are accustomed to select their own standard bearers. That right is one of the most dearly prized possessions of our Maryland Free State. That right we will not surrender to anyone.

"Senator Tydings on his record of the last 12 years can justly seek to be your choice and I am confident that he will be renominated by you."

"The appearance of Radcliffe fighting for Tydings is one of the most dramatic aspects of the stirring political battle. His friendship with Roosevelt, as has been said, goes back to the World War days. At that time Radcliffe was vice president and director of the Fidelity & Deposit Co., of this city. The late Van Lear Black was chairman of the board of that company and also principal owner of the Baltimore Sun.

After Roosevelt had made his unsuccessful bid for the Vice Presidency in 1920, he was made a vice chairman and director of Fidelity and placed in charge of the company's New York business. Radcliffe saw a lot of him in those days. Later, while the President was making his gallant fight against infantile paralysis, Radcliffe frequently visited him and their friendship became even stronger.

Served Roosevelt Well.

Radcliffe worked hard for Roosevelt's election in 1932 and his re-election in 1936. He was keynoter at the '36 Maryland Democratic Convention. Also he has been in charge of all the President's birthday ball drives in Maryland.

Radcliffe announced his support of Tydings, re-election back in May, and eventually became his campaign manager. At that time it looked as though Representative Lewis would run for another term in the House. He did not announce for the Senate until June.

However distressed Radcliffe may have been by the open break between Roosevelt and Tydings—signalized by the President's castigation of Tydings as a "betrayer" of the New Deal—he indicated from the outset that he would increase his efforts on the senior senator's behalf.

Tomorrow Radcliffe is going to Ocean City on the Eastern Shore, a favorite haunt of Eastern Shore politicians, and there he is expected to begin work trying to offset any damage the President may do on Labor Day.

jury failed to reach an agreement on a verdict.

The A. F. of L. chief said he also had before him reports that the Justice Department might not seek retrial of the conspiracy indictments against the Harlan employes.

Contract Ratified.

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., Aug. 28.—Union miners of all major Harlan coal companies save one were in contractual relations with their employers today and predictions of peace in "bloody Harlan County" were made by union and company spokesmen.

The unionization culminated years of labor strife in the rich southeastern Kentucky coal field.

An agreement, signed at Cincinnati by attorneys for the United Mine Workers of America and the Harlan County Coal Operators' Association, was ratified today by 111 delegates from 37 locals in this vicinity.

George Titler, international representative of the United Mine Workers of America in Harlan County, said the signature of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chief, would signify final ratification of the agreement.

The contract brings into relations with the union all mines of the 17 companies which were defendants, together with 39 individuals, in the recent trial at London, Ky., on criminal charges of conspiring to prevent unionization of the field.

Resulted in Mistrial.

With the signing of the contract yesterday, the National Labor Relations Board agreed to drop charges of Wagner act violation against the companies, but whether the charges against the corporate defendants in the conspiracy trial would also be dropped remained in question.

The latter case resulted in a mistrial and a hearing to fix a place and date for a new trial was set for September 17 in Federal court at Lexington, Ky.

Brien McMahon, Assistant Attorney General, chief of Government counsel at the trial, said in Washington he had made "no commitments of any kind or character" to "any representative of the Harlan County Coal Operators Association looking to the disposition of the case."

McMahon said "the Department of Justice has not been a party to any negotiations between the United Mine Workers and Harlan County Coal Operators Association which, according to press reports resulted in contracts being signed yesterday." He said the Department's next move would be at Lexington when the court will act on the Government's motion for the setting of a trial date.

New Building For McKendree Church Begun

500 Watch as Rev. Mr. Rose Breaks Ground for $90,000 Edifice.

More than 500 looked on last night as the Rev. Samuel E. Rose, pastor of the recently-united Langdon and McKendree Methodist Episcopal congregations, turned the first earth for the new $90,000 edifice at South Dakota and Rhode Island avenues and Twenty-fourth street northeast.

Participating in the exercises were neighborhood parishes, civic associations and the Federation of Churches, represented by the Rev. John L. Mixon, who told the assembly that "in the breaking of the ground are opened up new ways of service for the congregation, which will give other churches an impetus to go ahead."

Mrs. Fannie Carter and Mrs. R. Brotherington, for 68 and 62 years, respectively, McKendree parishioners, joined officers of the Sunday school, the Ladies' Aid Society and other units of the church in breaking the ground. Mrs. M. F. Beebe, 93-year-old member of the McKendree Church, which formerly stood on Massachusetts avenue between Ninth and Tenth streets, sent congratulations from Connecticut, where she is staying.

Others who spoke briefly, in addition to the Rev. Mr. Rose, former McKendree pastor, were Renah F. Camalier, former president of the Methodist Union, and Dr. Freeman Wise, president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens' Association. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, District superintendent of the Methodist Church, sent greetings by letter lauding the project.

The Rev. Henry H. Rowland, former Langdon minister; the Rev. M. C. Smith, pastor of the Brookland Baptist Church; the Rev. Samuel H. Kornmann, of the St. Stephen's Evangelical Church, and the Rev. A. S. Mowbray also took part in the ceremony.

The new church, work on which is expected to start next week, will be of modern Gothic design, stone construction, and will contain Sunday school, church and parsonage units. Morrison Brothers, of Bethesda, are the builders, and Weener and Fink are the architects. The building committee is headed by the Rev. Mr. Rose.

Arlington Tax Receipts Jump 15% for Year

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509

Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green, of Arlington County, has announced the State will receive about 15 per cent more in taxes this year than last. He estimates the total taxes collected by his office for the State, including license fees, will amount to about $175,384.50 as compared to the total last year of $152,580.85.

The taxable income in the county for this year totals $3,023,358, r 27 per cent more than last year. The income levy this year will yield $56,361.38 in State taxes as compared with $44,289.35 for last year.

"The income tax in Arlington County is assessed against business and professional persons and persons in private employment as Federal employes are exempt from the State income tax," Green said. The large number of Arlington County residents who are Federal employes is shown by the fact that of approximately 5,000 income returns filed this year only 2,096 were taxable.

Money on deposit shows an increase of about 13 per cent this year and the State will realize $2,134,784 this year as compared to $1,881,512 in 1937. Bonds assessed last year were valued at $3,128,046, compared with $3,466,943 for this year. They will yield a tax to the State of $18,574.39.

itary occupation. The protests were referred to Paris.

Thirty French farms lie on the Italian side in territory which, according to popular legend, Napoleon III gave to Victor Emmanuel I in 1860 so the Italian King could hunt chamois there.

French newspapers said Italy was expelling the French farmers in order to build military fortifications in the region.

French government officials expressed hope a settlement could be reached in the month Italy has promised the French residents for reaping their harvests provided they yield immediately their claims to the land.

French residents recently were expelled under similar circumstances from farms in Germany. The land dispute, also, was the second incident over the French-Italian frontier, following bans by both countries preventing their nationals from crossing the border except with special visas.

Boy May Survive 13,000-Volt Shock

Adolph Heuer, 15, of 1233 Eleventh-and-a-Half street southeast, came in contact with 13,000 volts of electricity yesterday, but he may live to tell the story.

Police believe the youth climbed atop a Pennsylvania freight train, and came in contact with a power line. He was found unconscious a few feet from the railroad's tunnel at Virginia avenue and Eleventh street southeast by James Gatley, of 1115 Potomac avenue southeast.

Physicians at Casualty Hospital said Heuer suffered third-degree burns on his hands and body and a fracture of his right leg.

from London that the British government, dissatisfied with Germany's adamant attitude toward Prague, might lodge some sort of direct protest in Berlin within a day or two.

British Protest Possible.

This protest, it was said, might contain a strongly worded warning of the possible consequences of continued Nazi pressure against Czechoslovakia.

There were reports Runciman had protested to Henlein against the Sudenten German party's action Friday in rescinding a "no violence" order and permitting the 3,500,000 Sudetens to "fight back" in defense of lives, liberty and property.

The proclamation rescinding the previous order was immediately termed a violation of the law by the Prague government which warned that any attempts to use the proclamation to create disorder would be dealt with severely by police.

Girl, 13, Is Killed When Struck by Auto

Suffolk, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—Edna Ercelle Griggs, 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dudley James Griggs, who live on the Holland highway, about two and one-half miles from Suffolk, was fatally injured today when struck by an automobile driven by Jeter D. Ferguson, 31, of Boykins. She died at Lakeview Hospital an hour later.

Police said Edna, with her little sister, Jacqueline, and two girl companions, Katherine Wiggins and Barbara Robinson, were returning from Bethlehem Christian Sunday School when Ferguson attempted to pass another car and came upon the group of girls.

Edna was thrown into the air and fell against the corner of the windshield and fender, suffering a fractured skull.

Britain Calls Envoy to Berlin Home to Confer on War Threat

Crisis

lieved, Britain might once more express hope for a peaceful solution of the Sudeten German problem and indicate exactly how Britain might become involved in any conflict.

Several influential members of the British cabinet are said o be pressing for a more emphatic and precise warning to Hitler. It is doubtful whether they will be satisfied, because Chamberlain, on present form, would attempt to soothe rather than rumple Hitler's feelings.

Officially speaking, the British government still thinks the Czech crisis capable of solution if a conciliatory spirit is shown on all sides. Whitehall was the more disturbed, therefore, to hear during the weekend that Sudeten party headquarters had issued a proclamation advocating "relaxation of discipline," among the party's rank and file. Incidents growing out of such a step might, it is felt here, give Hitler an excuse for marching across the Czech border.

London also awaits with misgivings the Nuremberg congress for fear it might be made the occasion for inflaming the extremists of the Nazi party and lead to irrevocable decisions.

Fleet Masses at Sea.

In any case the British do not intend to be caught napping. Almost the entire British home fleet will be concentrated in the North Sea off Scotland beginning September 9, while the Nazis hold their conclave. The fleet will consist in part of five powerful battleships, four cruisers, 30 destroyers, two aircraft carriers and five submarines.

Although the warships, in official language, will be engaged in their "routine autumn exercises," they will be in such a position as to be out of danger from an aerial attack on London or the south coast from the continent, and yet in readiness to swoop eastward through the North Sea toward the Baltic.

It is recalled here that in July, 1914, the admiralty took the precaution of concentrating the fleet in much the same area.

Orders for the fleet exercises were broadcast to 51 ships at midnight last Thursday. The climax of training will take place in the week beginning October 18, when the ships will visit their old, wartime base at Scapa Flow. The fleet will then break up until November 14.

In sole charge of these large-scale maneuvers will be Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, who assumed command of the home fleet last May.

He is regarded as the Navy's leading tactician and for several years has been designated for advancement to top rank.

Navy Paper Urges Purge in Red Fleet

Moscow, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Navy newspaper Red Fleet stressed today the necessity of purging Soviet naval strategy of destructive theories.

Enemies of the people working both within and without the walls of the naval academy, the newspaper's article said, "tried to create doubt in the minds of young commanders in connection with the possibility of building an invincible Soviet navy."

Red Fleet said advocates of these "defeatist theories," by dicouraging construction of large warships, really were trying "to deprive the Soviet navy of its artillery in a coming war."

Rep. Jones Asks Rail Rate Cut on Export Crops

House Group Chairman for Same Reductions That Industry Gets.

By the Associated Press.

Administration leaders have agreed to seek lower freight rates on farm products moving to the sea for export, Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, said yesterday.

He pointed out in an interview Secretary Wallace had authority under the farm act to intervene in any freight rate case involving farm products, or to initiate proceedings designed to reduce rates.

"Naturally we want to produce every bushel of wheat and bale of cotton that domestic and foreign markets will absorb," he said. "This benefits everybody who handles it.

Industry Received Reductions.

"Industry has received reduced freight rates on exports for years, and there is no reason why the farmer should not get the same thing."

The freight rate on a plow shipped from Moline, Ill., to Galveston, Tex., for export is about half that for a plow shipped over the same route for sale at Galveston, Jones declared. Steel shipped from Pittsburgh to New York City moves for about one-third less than that shipped for use in this country, he continued.

"The trouble in the past has been there was nobody to fight for lower export freight rates for the farmer," the Texan said.

Russell Asks Fixed Price.

His statement came shortly after the Government had announced an export subsidy program for wheat, and Secretary Wallace had given notice the Administration was prepared to take "aggressive action" if necessary to keep its "fair share" of world trade in wheat, cotton, hog products and other agricultural commodities.

Senator Russell (Democrat), Georgia, who voted against the present act, said in another interview Saturday he favored "some sort of domestic allotment scheme so the farmer gets a fixed price for that part of his crop consumed in this country."

Russell indicated also that he would seek an export subsidy for cotton, saying that crop should receive treatment equal to that given wheat.

Asks Wallace Support.

By the Associated Press

Representative Gearhart (Republican), California, urged Secretary Wallace yesterday to support his proposal for Federal expenditures up to $140,000,000 from customs receipts to develop new uses for farm products.

In a letter made public through the Republican National Committee, Gearhart told Wallace he believed the farmer's only hope for prosperity lay in discovery of such new uses and of new farm products to supply old demands.

"After five years of seeking to restrict production you now find yourself in the embarrassing position of projecting plans for the payment of export subsidies, a scheme which you, on occasion, have severely denounced," his letter said.

"Has not the time come, Mr. Secretary, to place our emphasis on broadening the market for agricultural commodities instead of wasting additional hundreds of millions of dollars in the futile effort of curb production?"

Bakery Employe Is Killed by Train Near Cottage City

Albert Weidman, 38, of 22 Spa street, Cottage City, Md., was killed by a crack Baltimore & Ohio passenger train near his home yesterday. His skull was crushed.

Eugene B. Plumer, chief of the Mount Rainier police, said he had seen Weidman and another man in the 3200 block of Otis street, Mount Rainier, at 9 a. m., about an hour and a half before he was killed.

Acting Coroner M. E. Rian, of Colmar Manor, said an inquest would be held Thursday night.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Pet tune of the swanky set at the moment is "A Twinkle In Your Eye" from "I Married an Angel," says Maurice Kafka, partner of Sidney of the Mayflower. It's a melodious little piece, packed with charm.

Remember "You Never Know," the musical comedy that shone at the National Theater last spring with the combined presences of Lupe Velez, Clifton Webb and Libby Holman? It finally is going into New York. But, what we started to say was that the show's best tunes, "At Long Last, Love," "You Never Know" and "From Alpha to Omega," have been played in the Mayflower Lounge all spring and summer, but have just been released to the radio. This confirms the general impression we've had for some time that the top-notch dance spots regularly beat the radio in bringing out the best tunes.

Hi-i-i! You guys and gals, Oscar will be back at the Hi Hat today. He should be all sun-tanned, bursting with energy, after that Adirondack vacation.

Did Barnee start something when he launched that Lambeth Walk on the Shoreham Terrace! The dancers just can't get enough of it. They won't stop it and they don't want to go home even when time's up. Looks as though Barnee has started a Lambeth Walkathon.

New Terrace show starting this evening will include Fritz and Jean Hubert, billed as "The Realistic Inebriates." But inebriates are usually surrealistic. Also there'll be Dancer Jeanne Kirk, beautiful and blonde (see pic above) and the "Three Monocled Ambassadors" who may sing, dance or turn cartwheels for all we know. But, we'll wager they can't do the rumba as well as a couple of Washington's bona fide ambassadors.

• • • •

Mayfair's extremely popular Perry Martin especially likes to barytone the "Desert Song," because he played its accompaniment for Alexander Gray in the original production of the great light opera of the same name.

• • • •

Home town dancing competition will be something terrific at the Bamboo Gardens this week. For Virginia Barry, one of Washington's best tap and character dancers (she teaches dancing, too) will costar with Johnny Barnes, now held over for the third week. There'll also be magician Otis Manning with his company and ballroom dancers Wayne and Roberta. Looks like a big and bright show.

Sweet dance music is provided by the Bamboo Revelers and "Smilin' Sammy" Richardson will sing and emcee both in his own cordial style.

Hooray! Johnny Shaw will be back on the Madrillon bandstand this evening. He's been rambling through the Alleghenies, so he should have some new hill billy songs. Peter Borras tells us that the Madrillon is planning something new in vocalistics. Of this, more later.

• • • •

Fan dancing at the Lotus this week! But not in the Sally Rand manner, let us say in a hurry. The beauty chorus of Al Norton's Revue will do a waltz number with black fans. It's said to be a lovely. All numbers of the revue will be changed this week, so that it's really an all new show.

Buddy Shaner will both sing and go cowboy this week. In "bronco busting" costume he will act as partner for Tex Wilson, the bull whip expert.

• • • •

Tisket-Taskets:

Some of the special goodies you'll be served by Chef Lube at the Hour Glass, opening formally next Thursday, will be chicken en casserole, weiner schnitzel and barbecued spare ribs.

Little Joe Hart, whose orchestra was a smash hit early in the season at Glen Echo, will return for a special post-season engagement after Labor Day.

Favorite number of Durward Bowersox, Rainbow Room's violinist superlative, is Debussy's "Clair de Lune." He also brings great big tears into the eyes of the Southern customers when he launches into "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny."

That wistful look of Johnny Slaughter's (Wardman Metronome Room) is the result of his liking baseball too much and never having time to see a game between playing at both the Carlton and Wardman.

• • • •

For a sample of the delicious drinkables and sweet entertainment, they're going to have at the new Hour Glass, you should stop by the King Cole Room, senior Vincent Gallegher spot, and sip a planters' punch while listening to Eve Knight's honeyed warbling.

• • • •

A happy slogan is that of Brinkley's ork. It's "You Name It, We'll Play It."

• • • •

Good Bluff.

The spectacular military parade held in Berlin this week was obviously designed to impress others besides Admiral Horthy and the other Hungarian officials who had accompanied him on his state visit to the Third Reich.

This is seen in the fact that Hitler made use of the occasion to give foreign military attaches a glimpse of new types of armament which Germany has developed and of whose existence none of them had previously been aware. One of these weapons was a mobile heavy gun, representing, it is said, a new principle in field artillery. Four of these weapons were in the parade, arousing memories of the famed Big Berthas which did havoc in Paris during the war.

It need hardly be said that these weapons moved by the spectators too rapidly to permit of more than casual inspection, yet slowly enough to leave a profound impression upon trained observers.

Actually, of course, no outsider knows how well these guns function. But this hiatus of essential information will be filled in by imagination. Which is, no doubt, just what Hitler and the German high command desires. In lifting a corner of Germany's secret military preparedness they were clearly out to impress the world with the extent and advancement of these preparations.

The indications are that they succeeded. There are times when the best bluff lies in putting the cards, the best ones anyway, on the table. It tends to conceal the fact that more than splendid military equipment is necessary to win a modern war.

It seems there's never a slack season in monkey business.

Cardenas, At Bay.

The Mexican press has reacted violently against the second American note regarding the expropriation of foreign-owned properties. Strong editorials condemn it as a "terrible, acrid document" and as an "attempt to violate Mexican sovereignty." The outbursts are designed, so it is believed in Mexico City, to force President Cardenas into a refusal of Secretary Hull's conciliatory proposals. If this is the case, the strategy throws an interesting light on the whole Mexican picture.

The implication is clear that President Cardenas is not certain of the wisdom of the recent expropriation orders; that he is tempted to backtrack on them. His doubts are not shared by Mexican labor, however, or at least the highly organized unions that speak for it.

Here, then, may be the real explanation for the ill-advised seizure of foreign holdings in Mexico. It was a surprise and disappointment to the many who admired President Cardenas and sympathized with his broad aims that he should have made such a brash mistake. Now it appears that he was not entirely his own master in the decision. Militant labor leaders, to whom he was obligated for important political support, forced him into it and are now working to prevent his slightest retreat from his position.

Thus far Secretary Hull's protests have not touched on the petroleum properties taken from American control last March. He has confined himself entirely to what he describes as the "confiscation" of a collection of small American farms nationalized without compensation to the owners many years ago. In general, of course, his arguments denying Mexico's right to expropriate without indemnity apply with equal cogency to land or oil. However, certain aspects of the oil companies' plight make their case particularly compelling.

The seized agricultural properties have by now been incorporated into communal farms or otherwise distributed so that their return is not feasible. Not so with the petroleum properties which are still intact, although reportedly deteriorating at the hands of incompetent technicians. Moreover, in the oil seizures only foreigners were affected. Thus Mexico's weakly contrived argument that she plays no favorites in promoting social reforms lacks point in regard to oil. Finally, the petroleum properties were taken more to punish the operators for their refusal to abide by a labor award than to advance any specific social policy.

At the moment an application by the oil companies for an injunction against the Mexican government is pending in the Mexican supreme court. A mere nod from one of the justices, all beholden to President Cardenas for their positions, could restore the properties to their American owners. This, if accompanied by acceptable guarantees that no further expropriation of any kind would be considered by Mexico until compensation were assured, this would do much to close the disheartening rip beginning in the important inter-American "good neighbor" policy.

Our Weight In The Scales.

In his statement commemorating the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Briand-Kellogg Pact, Secretary Hull was his usual high-minded self.

He insisted that the pledge entered into by 63 nations a decade ago to renounce war as an instrument of policy was still binding on all of them. He argued that "not even a victor can gain from war" and deplored the fact that in some parts of the world "strife and conflict are bringing untold misery to millions" while elsewhere "the idea of warfare is actually being glorified." And he concluded that "on the observance or nonobservance of the solemn pledges made ten years ago depends the preservation of all that is valuable and worth while in the life of each and every nation."

This is good so far as it goes. But the statement clearly does not go far enough. Moral preachments, admonitions to peace, reminders of treaty obligations have not, in the past, stopped certain nations from treating the Briand-Kellogg Pact as a scrap of paper. They are not likely to stop them now. And our own unhappy record of the past decade has created the impression in their minds that it is safe to ignore such admonitions from this side of the Atlantic.

The United States has strongly deplored every act of aggression that has been committed since the current cycle of international lawlessness was inaugurated by Japan seven years ago. But this has not prevented successive American Governments, Republican and Democratic, from treating aggressor and victim alike even though such a policy has usually worked to the advantage of the lawbreaker. We continue to pursue the same Jekyll-Hyde policy today.

Mr. Hull himself has on repeated occasions called attention to the fact that the outbreak of a major conflict anywhere in the world constitutes a potential danger to the peace and welfare of the United States. He did so most recently on August 16 when he said that "our own situation is profoundly affected by what happens elsewhere in the world." And since then the international situation has grown more rather than less tense. Despite its reluctance to do so the British government, for instance, found it necessary, last Saturday, to issue a new word of warning to Germany against plunging Europe into war over the Czechoslovak issue.

"The beginning of a conflict," said Sir John Simon, "is like a beginning of a fire in a high wind. It may be limited at the start. But who can say how far it would spread or how much destruction it would do or how many may be called to beat it out?"

In saying this the British chancellor of the exchequer was envisaging the inevitable British involvement in a war that might have its origins in the Czechoslovak problem. But such a war would not leave the United States unscathed either. Even should we manage to stay out of the fighting which, in view of the experiences of the past, is more than doubtful, we could not remain unaffected by the evil consequences of such an orgy of blood-letting and destruction.

Our own self-interest, therefore, demands that this Nation make clear beyond peradventure of a doubt that it stands with the elements and nations working for peace and against those who contemplate using war as an instrument of their policy; that our opposition to lawlessness will, this time, take a stronger form than homilies and preachments; that, at the very least, the aggressor can expect and will receive no aid of any kind from us. President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have, from time to time, spoken around this point. They must do so again and without circumlocution. The situation calls for plain speaking.

It is not yet too late to save the world from plunging into a disaster too awful to contemplate. But if such a catastrophe is to be averted no nation, possessing the vast power that ours does, can afford at this moment to stand on the sidelines.

One Of A Kind.

Sometime ago somebody said that Mr. Victor McLaghlen must be a Fascist because he had organized Hollywood's famous White Horse Troop. Only the other day somebody suggested that little Shirley Temple is a tool of the Comintern. But we dare anybody to pin a label on Miss Carole Lombard. Miss Lombard is something all by herself—the only extant specimen of the Joyous Taxpayer.

The other day Miss Lombard expressed great enthusiasm over the fact that the Government got more than four-fifths of her gross income of $465,000. After contemplating all the things for which the Government was spending the taxes it had taken from her, Miss Lombard was moved to say: "I think I got my money's worth."

However, somebody in the Bureau of Internal Revenue has cast a doubtful eye over the figures released by Miss Lombard's press agent. There must be a mistake somewhere, he says. She might even, he thinks, have been overpaying her taxes.

One can readily sympathize with the distress that a refund of overpaid taxes would, no doubt, cause Miss Lombard. But certainly she should take comfort in the thought that such a disappointment would be merely temporary. If the tax collectors did not intend to take away quite as much as four-fifths of her earnings this year, there is always next year, and the next. She may with reason look joyfully forward to the year when she will be handing over not four-fifths, but nine-tenths, or nineteen-twentieths, or even ninety-nine one-hundredths. Anyway, if Miss Lombard is that unique kind of person whose happiness is in direct ratio to her taxes, her life is certain to be one of ever-increasing joy.

Politics And Relief.

High praise is due Chairman Sheppard and other members of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee for their exposure and vigorous condemnation of attempts to put political pressure upon regular Federal employes and relief workers on behalf of candidates for office.

The committee could have found many plausible excuses for a policy of inaction. Indeed, Senator Sheppard was greatly opposed to undertaking an investigation of political misuse of the relief organization at this time. The committee, he felt, had enough work to do without undertaking so difficult and thankless a task just in advance of the primary contests.

However, his natural reluctance to launch an inquiry certain to create antagonism to the members of the committee has not been made an excuse for passivity. On the contrary, as soon as the decision was made Senator Sheppard and his colleagues lost no time investigating complaints of coercion with the aid of Federal funds and patronage. They promptly sent agents into the States where conditions were reported to be worst, such as Kentucky and Tennessee, and they have not hesitated to denounce the abuses discovered to exist, regardless of whom they might hit.

A similarly courageous attitude characterizes the efforts of the committee to prevent the Workers Alliance from collecting contributions from its WPA membership to support the candidacy of legislators believed to be friendly to the perpetuation of the WPA on a more generous scale. Senator Sheppard has not been content with echoing the views of President Roosevelt who merely expressed the hope that those on relief will not contribute money for the purpose of aiding any party. Neither is he satisfied with the reassuring statements of WPA Administrator Hopkins who would have us believe that the intrusion of politics into the relief organizations is neither widespread nor serious.

The committee has sent out its own investigators to discover the facts. And, already, a large amount of evidence has been assembled tending to show that relief workers as well as others on the Government pay rolls have in many cases been outrageously exploited by local political factions.

Efforts to obtain so-called "voluntary" contributions for the Workers Alliance have presented a particularly difficult problem for the committee, since there is some doubt whether such solicitation can be considered illegal. After study of the law, however, Senator Sheppard concluded that it would be in violation of the criminal code for the head of the Workers Alliance to obtain funds from WPA labor for the purpose of aiding and abetting Federal employes in making contributions for any political purpose whatever.

As latest reports indicate that the Alliance intends to defy this warning, Senator Sheppard may have opportunity to test the validity of his contention that WPA workers are Federal employes coming within the scope of the corrupt practices act. The issue is most important and a speedy decision of the question imperative. Should it be decided that WPA workers are not protected by law from the kind of political pressure against which protection is supposed to be afforded Government employes in a much less vulnerable position, the fact should be established as soon as possible.

Corrupt practices acts cannot altogether suppress the kind of illegitimate "shakedowns" masquerading as "voluntary" contributions which the committee has been investigating in California. Nevertheless, by making public the facts about the exploitation of relief workers and by putting legal safeguards about them, it should be possible to eliminatte the worst abuses. But for the public-spirited activities of Senator Sheppard and his committee, WPA scandals would probably have flourished in comparative obscurity, with remedial action consisting chiefly of admonitory letters from WPA Administrator Hopkins and sporadic disciplining of a few of the worst offenders against the injunction not to inject politics into relief.

Dogfight.

From the Chicago Tribune.

In American humor of 50 years ago there was a story (by Mark Twain?) of two dogs, one on the outside of a tall picket fence and the other within. They fell into a violent rage on seeing each other. They bristled and snarled and made furious attacks, with the fence between them. They dashed along the palings, biting the wood in their efforts to get at each other.

People gathered to see this exhibition of fury. Then one observer noted that 50 feet or so from where the dogs were struggling at each other there was an opening, big enough to allow them to grapple. The spectators, seeing that there was this possibility that the furious animals, dashing about, might come to the opening, almost held their breath in the suspense of waiting to see what happened. The dogs neared the opening and the suspense grew. Apparently the dogfight of all ages was just on the point of starting.

The warriors reached the opening. They took one startled look at each other in amazement which revealed itself in drooping tails and relaxing muscles. Then the inside dog departed for back of the barn and the outside dog took around the nearest corner. Somehow or other the events at Changkufeng, on the Manchukuoan-Siberian border, recall this story of the dogfight.

Political Morality.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This "morality question" (of Republicans voting Democratic) has got me down for the count.

I have voted the Democratic ticket all my political life and I am nearly 60 years old. I was taught that it was "immoral" to "split your ticket." So I was surprised and somewhat embarrassed when Mr. Roosevelt, soon after he began his first term as President, stated in a press conference that one would be surprised to know how many times he had split his ticket, or voted for Republicans. I do not remember his exact words. My attention was called to this statement by a Republican friend. This friend also called my attention to the fact that the President did not consider it immoral to place three Republicans in his Cabinet, as members of his official family. Also, we old-time Democrats have noticed that many of the men and women who are filling key positions in all the departments of Government are Republicans, either appointed or retained by this Administration.

If we Democrats mention this fact, or make any complaint about it, we are told very gently that "this country is normally Republican and it is necessary for a great many Republicans to vote with the few remaining Democrats in order for us to win in 1932 and 1936." So I judge from this that it was not considered immoral, in either 1932 or 1936, for a Republican to vote the Democratic ticket and change the result of an election. If it was moral in 1932 and 1936, and to some extent before, why is it now immoral?

Pro And Con.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I have just read your editorial "Upon What Meat," conecrning the President's speech in Georgia.

Without consulting your files, I cannot say whether or not you accused Herbert Hoover of dictatorial tactics when, in the fall of 1932, he told the voters of Indiana that the services of Jim Watson were "required" in the Senate.

Presumably you did not, for your editorial today seems to indicate that Roosevelt is the first President to indicate his choice in a State race.

The President was creating no precedent by giving his opinions on the candidates as he did. You would have more properly based your objection on its true basis—that you approve the political philosophy of Senator George and the Republican Party, and abhor that of the New Deal, and want to see the Senator renominated on that ground.

LEWIS M. GILL.
Washington, Aug. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to thank you for your splendid editorial entitled "Upon What Meat?"

I wish it were possible to get that editorial into the hands of every person of voting age in the United States, especially those in Georgia.

Two Replies.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Arthur W. Atwood, in The Post August 23, criticizing your admirable editorial, "Underlying the Purge," says:

"But the voters have made their desires very clear in the elections of 1932, 1934, and 1936, and it is perfectly plain that they are in favor of the New Deal."

Does Mr. Atwood really believe that the voters in the 1932 election, for instance, knew what was up the President's sleeve? Let's see what candidate Roosevelt promised regarding the platform. On July 2, 1932, he said:

"That admirable platform, the platform which you have adopted is clear. I accept it 100 per cent."

It is well known that as President Mr. Roosevelt ignored that platform and violated his promises to the voters. He conceived and has tried to carry out a platform of his own. No mention was made in the party platform of the NRA or any other of the alphabetical schemes. The voters who had elected him on account of his glowing promises and because they were tired of the depression and ready for any change whatever—not being mind readers—voted for and elected a pig in a bag!

CAPT. CHARLES H. COE.
Washington, Aug. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Andrew Jackson's Cousin" argues energetically but from a mistaken premise in his reply to my letter to The Post and his comment on The Post's editorial reference to the letter.

"A. J. C." uses the word "bludgeon" in entirely the wrong place. The bludgeoning that has been practiced in this country for years has been by organized wealth to keep in office its political tools and to thwart the popular will. Even after the nation has so emphatically expressed itself in a series of elections, organized wealth has been able to snap its fingers at the voters. Pressure of all kinds, direct and indirect, blunt and subtle, has been exerted to cause Congressmen belonging to the party whose program the voters have endorsed to resist that program. In spite of having elected a President and an overwhelming majority of lawmakers supposedly loyal to New Deal measures, the people have seen these measures defeated, delayed or vitiated in Congress.

The voters have been fettered and bound by the ruthless oligarchs of special privilege and their agents in Congress. Mr. Roosevelt urges the voters to break these fetters and bonds by defeating Congressmen and Senators who have tied their hands. The voters can heed the appeal or disregard it and permit plutocratic interests to continue their control for a longer period. There are sufficient indications of civic awakening to justify the confidence that the warning will be acted upon, and the betrayers driven out. LINN A. E. GALE.

A Correction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under the heading "Working For Washington" in The Post of August 19 I notice that a Mr. Johnson is given credit for starting the Progressive Consumer Magazine. As the article in question seems to have been written in the interest of Mr. Charles M. Thomas, I am assuming that the name of Johnson was an error, and that it was to Mr. Thomas that credit is given for starting the magazine. In either case, however, the article was in error. The Progressive Consumer Magazine was founded by Mr. T. DuPont Georges, and has been owned, controlled and published by him from the date of first publication to the present time. While it is true that Mr. Charles Thomas was at one time associated with the magazine as an editor, he did not start it. We will be greatly appreciative if you will correct this error.

Two Reactions To The Kingston Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hope you will pardon this additional outburst, but the more I think about Mr. Roosevelt's diplomatic boondogling in assuring Canada help in case of invasion, the madder I get.

I have tried hard to find one logical reason for that silly gesture but to date I have not succeeded.

Everyone knows that Canada does not, and never will, need help. Japan is the only possible enemy and might bombard Vancouver and Victoria. But a Japanese fleet would run into hundreds of the successors of Maj. Bishop in the air. The idea of landing a Japanese army in Canada is comic opera.

Then, searching for a reason, let us assume the President thought he was reassuring Great Britain of our friendship—great democracies together, and all that sort of thing. Let's give that the critical once-over.

The strength of Great Britain in her dominions, aside from blood ties, is the guarantee of protection. If the United States assures Canada protection, sentiment for an isolation policy is automatically built up in Canada and in the next war the dominion might easily be weaned away enough to refuse to send troops to England. Wouldn't that be a great help? Mr. Roosevelt does not dare to assure Great Britain that the United States would not "stand idly by" if an enemy "empire" invades England. I can understand that. We had some of that in 1918 and are still paying. So why this Canadian flub-dub?

Just one more point: If the United States were to assure South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and Canada protection, the British empire would dissolve. That will not happen, of course, but it is as sensible as the Canadian proposal. The fact that Canada is in North America and across the border has nothing to do with the case from a British standpoint.

I'll wager the State Department did not know about this speech. I'll bet Mr. Roosevelt thought it all up himself. It makes me think of the time in 1917 when George Creel sank a fictitious German submarine as a Thanksgiving present for the American people. The President's speech was 150 per cent baloney to give the boys and girls in Kingston a thrill. A. F. J.
Washington, Aug. 24.

To the Editor of the Post:—Sir: President Roosevelt recently assured Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King of Canada that he and all Canadians need have no further fear of attack from an enemy outside their borders. This "pat on the back" must have greatly heartened Mackenzie King and, because of it, he can feel sure of winning the next Canadian general election; he has done nothing in his years of stewardship as Prime Minister to merit a "purge." He is now one of the "anointed"—almost a Canadian New Dealer.

One wonders just how our President would go about carrying out his "happy promise" if a sudden emergency arose. What would he use for an army? What would he use for an air force? What would he use for war material? When and how and from where would he feed and clothe this army as it merrily wended its way across Canada in quest of the invader?

We have followed a policy of pacifism for about two decades and have become soft and flabby. Our youth are untrained and unfit and we might as well admit it.

As a former member of the original C. E. F. let me assure you that there is no nation existent today more capable of resisting invasion than is Canada and the Canadians. They would stand as one against any invader and, as a country, would serve the U. S. A. as a buffer state as little Belgium served France in 114.

Incidentally, President Roosevelt apparently overlooks the fact that Canada is a member of the Commonwealth of British Nations and it is unlikely that the other nations in that group would stand idly by and allow the U. S. A. to do all the "protecting of Canada."

I asked a good Canadian friend of mine if he thought that the Canadian people would resent the remarks of our President and he said: "No, they look on it as just another speech."

The Post Impressionist

Vacation Morning.

WE JUST sat there on the grass. We had nothing to do. Overhead, a very large and very old beech tree, really a magnificent tree, threw shade over us that had a peculiar golden, late-summer quality about it. Beyond the edge of the shade, the sun lay on the close-cropped, very green grass. The lawns stretched endlessly away, rampant with flower beds. In one direction a long straight walk reached under the trees past four cottages; in the other the walk passed the clubhouse and went on to the largest "cottage" of all—a house with thirty rooms.

Two gardeners came around from behind the clubhouse and began trimming a hedge. They ran a long mowing blade over the top of the hedge and one of them turned a wheel that hung from straps over his shoulders. We watched them with interest. I'd never seen a hedge cut like that before. It seemed an easy effective way. I thought idly about how my arms had ached when, during school vacation, I had occasionally trimmed a hedge.

The girl from Chicago tapped a racquet on her knee. "Who wants to play badminton?" she asked.

Several people groaned. It was too much trouble. The man from New York said, "Did you ever hear the one about——"

I wish I remembered the story. It was pretty funny, and I laughed. But I didn't try to remember it. It was too much trouble.

I looked across the lawn, past some bamboo chairs on wheels, painted yellow with green rainproof cushions. Beside the chairs was an Italian pony cart, painted like a piece of Florentine pottery. The lawn ended with a fence along the edge of the bluff, and over the top of the fence I looked at Lake Michigan, an endless blue-green line against the clear blue and white horizon. The sun shone on the water, glistening with the wash of the waves, but there weren't any whitecaps. I knew the sun was good and hot on the beach.

"Who wants to go in the water?" I asked.

They groaned; it was too much trouble.

A manservant in a white jacket came out on the porch of the cottage nearest us. Quickly, the girl from Chicago said, "Who wants beer?" and without waiting for an answer called to the butler, "Will you please bring six beers and some cigarettes?" She leaned back against the tree.

Somebody said:

"Do you think you'll be able to lift your glass?"

Everbody laughed. I looked in the opposite direction toward the greenhouses in which enormous ripe grapes hung, and where round, beautiful peaches were ripening on peach trees flat against wire frames reaching to the glass roofs.

* * * *

The beer came in mugs and they were lifted. "We ought to drink to something," the wife of the man from New York said. A dachshund trotted across the grass. "Let's drink to Frieda." We drank to Frieda, whose full name was Frieda von Platterschulhausen.

"Nothing here makes any sense today," said the young man from New Jersey.

I thought it did. Suddenly I experienced a complete realization of the absolute value of utter relaxation. I remembered an alarm clock and busses, the smell of gasoline in city streets, the feel of asphalt soft under the midsummer sun, a desk, telephones, typewriters, the first and the fifteenth, lunch hour, places, people. I remembered white marble buildings reflecting the dazzling sun, the hum of electric fans, trees a little wilted in the late afternoon, night and cars packed around the Speedway, people lying on the grass in parks, that K Street was being widened. It all rushed by, in the flying way of things familiar because of a long and intimate acquaintanceship.

There was nostalgia in that memory; there was perspective in it, too. I thought, you can't see a thing when you're close to it. You've even got to get away from a city to know it well.

* * * *

Frieda, unaware that she was being toasted, vanished in the shrubbery. I noticed that the noise of the mechanical hedge-cutter had ceased; the men had finished and gone. Everything was still, like the stillness in the country. I looked across the drive and saw that the grapes on the grapevine on the fences were still green. I remembered that this was "up North." I even heard the sound made by a beer mug when someone put it down on the cement walk.

The man from New York cleared his throat. "Do you suppose," he asked the company, "that business is actually being done now in New York or Chicago or San Francisco?"

I lay on the grass in the shade, loking up.

"Or in Washington?" I said.

Fair Enough

North To South.

THERE is something about the South, a firm but evasive reserve, which always gives a Northern man the feeling that he has two strikes on him in any attempt to discuss any Southern problem. It is somewhat as though the South were a secret society, cordial and gracious to visitors on guest nights, but guardful of its inner business and quick to resent prying, or even consultation on Southern problems. There is no need to seek the reason, for we all know what the South suffered at the hands of the plundering hypocrites who compelled the organization of the original Ku Klux Klan and established a suspicion of Northerners and their motives which exists to this day.

But a long time has passed, people think now, and it seems not too pushful to suggest that the South is no longer a Tibet whose councils are not to be invaded or problems understood by Northern men of equal intelligence. Southern men and women come North and, after a short period for acquaintance and adjustment, find themselves fully privileged members of the community, qualified or, anyway, permitted to give advice on any subject and accepted as candidates for office.

• • • •

I HAVE no desire to invade the South, for my base is here, and I get along all right, but if the Southern States felt sufficiently informed of our Northern customs and feelings to command that we abolish alcohol, it surely is no worse intrusion by a Northerner to offer an occasional opinion on Southern problems.

The South almost got even with us with prohibition. Just as the slaves were freed without compensation to their owners, the property values of Northern distilleries and breweries were ruined by the foul amendment. The workers in many subsidiary lines of the beverage trade, and, I suppose, to some extent, the growers, were similarly wronged in 1919 by a law pressed on us by the South. It would seem facetious to add that millions in the North were woefully afflicted by the blight to their customs and appetites imposed by strangers who thought they knew what was best for us in the long run. But we did have a type of carpetbagger and scallawag in our midst, the spy and prohibition agent, who surely cannot have been less brutal and corrupt than the political missionaries who followed the Northern army.

• • • •

It is not that I have any special desire to sound off at the moment on a particular matter of Southern business. It is merely that the old answer, "You don't understand the South," presumes to disqualify the Northern man before he opens his mouth. It can't be as mysterious as that any more. And, as for our not understanding the Negro, we happen to have a couple of million of them living in our midst, mostly in cities—more is the pity, for most of them came from small towns and farms. In the North farming is one of the few occupations wide open to Negroes, but when they come here they flock to thick settlements, and the white people in the cities are saddened to learn that a colored man or woman from the fields is not necessarily gifted in the tasty preparation of fried chicken and juleps. You rarely see a Negro farmer up here.

• • • •

WE ARE TOLD that the South is economically sick, and that in a Nation is not something that can be localized. If a man has a broken leg he knows it all over, and it certainly is a matter of concern to the whole United States if the South is ailing as badly as we have been told. After all, the doctor bill will not be localized.

Maybe the diagnosis exaggerates, and it is possible that the proposed treatment is nothing but bread pills. But obviously the South doesn't feel pretty good, and it is a little cavalier of the South to resent a man's asking "How have you been?" or "Have you ever tried iodine?"

That old matter of State rights is up again, and I am for that except that I think there are too many States and there should be some consolidations. But I was for State rights all through prohibition and do not yet concede that the people of Georgia, for example, had any right to forbid the New York man to belly right up to the counter and buy himself a slab a gin. The loudest nuisance in all New York could not yell big enough to disturb the peace way down in Georgia, although I must say I met a few Mason-jar Georgians in those days who could have spanned the distance in two hoots and, maybe, a whisper.

Muscle-Man Atlas Prefers a Woman Built on His Lines

In a poll held to determine the proportions of the "model American girl" preparatory to the selection of Miss America 1938 at Atlantic City next month, Atlas submitted the following measurements as ideal:

Height, 5 feet 6 inches; bust, 38 inches; waist, 32 inches; hips, 38 inches; weight, 120 pounds; calf, 14 inches; ankle, 8½ inches; wrist, 6 inches.

Nine other "beauty experts," including artist Russell Patterson, tallied with Atlas' requirements as to height and ankle size, but reduced the bust measurement to 34½ inches, the waist to 26½ inches, and the hips to 36 inches.

Smith, assistant counsel in charge, and Ruth Seibert, secretary.

Miles Fairbank, assistant administrator, Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, is in town and at first blush you are impressed by how little sun tan he got during four years in the tropics. And as you talk with him, it is to become increasingly impressed with how seriously he takes his mission down there, how honestly he wants to help the Puerto Ricans help themselves.

He has brought some definite ideas from the island and these he is discussing with the Interior Department heads. But whatever may be his ideas for solving the islands' notoriously involved affairs, we were impressed by his utter frankness, his willingness to look the good and the bad of it in the face and then speak his own mind. He has studied the problem and, we think, knows it well. From this foundation he speaks his mind, with no humming or hawing, evasions or hedgings. It is, indeed, something for the record.

The American Federation of Government Employes, which holds annual convention in Chicago, beginning September 12, will feature on their program:

Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois. He will welcome the delegates who come from 45 States, Alaska, Cuba, Panama Canal Zone and British Columbia. He is expected to discuss certain phases of the public service . . . Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago . . . Postmaster Ernest J. Kruetgen and John Swanson, manager of the Seventh Civil Service District . . . William Green, if possible . . . Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, who will discuss the bi-partisan Civil Service Commission, which would have been abolished by the reorganization bill which failed of passage in Congress last spring. The extension of the merit system through the June 24 Executive orders and otherwise will be the top talk of the convention.

Recent retirements from the Government Printing Office are: William F. Blincoe, 2118 North Monroe street, Cherrydale, printing operative, 30 years' service; Daniel P. Bush, M.D., 1673 Columbia road northwest, medical and sanitary director, 37 years' service; Mary A. Connolly, 1223 Vermont avenue northwest, proofreader, 25 years' service; Joseph A. Dreis, 429 Sixth street northeast, proofreader, 36 years' service; Mrs. Cora B. McGrath, 1142 Abbey place northeast, office helper, 29 years' service, and J. Herman Reichard, 1011 North Carolina avenue southeast, guard, 15 years' service.

Of Public Interest

By Ernest Lindley

Keeping The Record Straight.

WHAT THE Democratic national platform of 1932 said is now chiefly a matter of historical interest. Since 1932 there have been two national votes of confidence in the Roosevelt Administration, each of them overwhelming. This year, through the election of Senators and Representatives, the program and general objectives of the Roosevelt Administration are again being submitted to the electorate for approval or disapproval.

However, with a disinclination to consider present-day problems that seem to be characteristic, many of Mr. Roosevelt's opponents are still talking about the Democratic platform of 1932. This is notably true of some of the supporters of Senator Tydings, of Maryland. If the Democratic pledges of six years ago are still a matter of current importance, the discussion might as well be based on the facts as disclosed by the record.

From some of the newspaper editorials now appearing, it would appear that the Democratic platform of 1932 consisted almost exclusively of a pledge "to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of Federal Government." There were, in fact, many other pledges in that platform, including the "extension of Federal credit to the States to provide unemployment relief whenever the diminishing resources of the States make it impossible for them to provide for the needy" and the "expansion of the Federal program of necessary and useful construction affected with a public interest" and "continuous responsibility of government for human welfare, especially for the protection of children."

• • • •

AS IT IS CUSTOMARY, the platform was interpreted and expanded by the candidate for President. In the very speech in which he accepted the Presidential nomination on July 2, 1932, Mr. Roosevelt proposed to put 1,000,000 men to work on a land-use program with special emphasis on reforestation. Presumably everyone of normal intelligence or better understood that it would cost a considerable amount of money to feed, clothe, and equip these men, even without allowing anything for their families.

On October 13, 1932, in a national radio address on unemployment and social welfare, Mr. Roosevelt reaffirmed his own declaration as Governor of New York in 1931 that "modern society, acting through its Government, owes the definite obligation to prevent the starvation or the dire want of any of its fellow men and women who try to maintain themselves but cannot." He asserted flatly that where the localities of the States found themselves unable to fulfill this obligation "it then becomes the positive duty of the Federal Government to step in to help."

In the same speech, Mr. Roosevelt said:

'We must economize in other ways, but it shall never be said that the American people have refused to provide the necessities of life for those who, through no fault of their own, are unable to feed, clothe and house themselves. The first obligation of Government is the protection of the welfare and well-being, indeed the very existence of its citizens."

• • • •

ON OCTOBER 19, 1932, in the celebrated Pittsburgh speech on the Federal budget, which Hugh S. Johnson, its chief author, quotes so often and so lovingly, Mr. Roosevelt said, with emphasis:

At the same time, let me repeat from now to election day so that every man, woman and child in the United States will know what I mean. If starvation and dire need on the part of any of our citizens make necessary the appropriation of additional funds which would keep the budget out of balance, I shall not hesitate to tell the American people the full truth and ask them to authorize the expenditure of that additional amount.

On October 31, 1932, at Boston, he devoted an entire speech to unemployment and long-range planning. In addition to promising immediate emergency relief for all who needed it, he proposed to provide "temporary work wherever that is possible," and to expedite Federal public works already authorized.

The Democratic platform of 1932, like probably every other platform ever put forward, contained inconsistencies. It was just as clear then as it is now that Mr. Roosevelt could not keep his promises to the unemployed and at the same time make a 25 per cent cut in the total Federal budget. The two pledges could be reconciled by making a cut in the regular Federal budget and then spending whatever was necessary to take care of the unemployed. That is the way they were reconciled. One of Mr. Roosevelt's first actions was to drive through the drastic economy act of 1933. Of course, most of the savings were only temporary. The economy act only made worse an already disastrous deflation. If Mr. Roosevelt hadn't made the mistake of being too conscientious about the Democratic platform, he wouldn't have shouldered the political and economic risks of driving through the economy act.

So much for the record on that point.

• • • •

PROMISES MADE in platforms and the speeches of candidates ought to be taken seriously. But with the most conscientious effort no platform-writer and no candidate could possibly foresee all the situations and problems with which he might have to deal. The voters don't elect words to office. They elect men, who assume the responsibility for government. This is 1938. The question before the voters is not what the Democratic platform in 1932 meant, but whether they approve or disapprove, on the whole, of the kind of government they are receiving under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt.

Books And Things

The Hawkeye State.

THEY raise the tallest corn in the world in Iowa, and bumper crops of authors—both for export. "Iowa: A Guide to the Hawkeye State (Viking, $2.50), latest volume in the American Guide Series, confides that Iowa last year grew more than a half million bushels of corn, and shipped more of it out-State in the form of fat hogs; and also that more than a third of the living sons and daughters of the State today live elsewhere.

They are a proud list of names these Iowa-born authors: they include such various men and women as Henry A. Wallace, now of Washington, and one Herbert Clark Hoover, of Palo Alto, Calif.; Thomas Beer, now resting on Natucket, and Ellis Parker Butler, of Long Island; Paul Engle, who dates his Iowa poetry from England's Oxford; Arthur Davison Ficke, who finds Florida more comfortable; Susan Glaspell, Henry Hansen, Josephine Herbst, who turn up in the news columns of New York City; James Norman Hall, who, in Tahiti, must be about as far from Iowa as he could get on this globe; Phil Strong, of Connecticut and Hollywood; Carl Van Vechten (yes, he, too, is Iowa-born); Ross Santee, a stanch Arizonian now, and James Stevens, who lives in Gary, Ind.

Grant Wood, Iowa painter of American Gothic, sticks to his State; and his advice and example had something to do with the widely heralded return of Thomas Hart Benson to his native neighboring Missouri. Jay Darling commutes between Des Moines and Washington, but the rest of the State's artists, like the writers, seem to honor their State from afar. The Guide makes no direct attempt to explain why; but there may be a hint in the brief paragraphs on land ownership. Iowa has a full quarter of the Grade I farm land in the United States; but three-quarters of Iowa's land, including the best, is owned by the banks. The old stock of Iowans went in for glitter and mortgages when land prices were high, and proud Iowa has become a State of tenant farmers. The bright boys and girls go elsewhere to earn their livings.

A GRAND pageant of Iowa's past unfolds itself in the pages of this Guide. Like many States of the Mississippi Valley, it has a long history and a short one. Frenchmen gazed at its soil more than two and a half centuries ago, but the State was mostly Indian land as recently as a century ago. Dubuque is named not after one of the old-time explorers, but after a remarkable young adventurer who settled in Iowa, the first white man to make his permanent home within the present State boundaries, about 1785, when Iowa was Spanish territory. The first white child known to have been born in Iowa did not squawl until 1829. A year after that a young man not yet known to fame drove the Sioux warriors out of the region; his name was Jefferson Davis.

They grew wheat, they grew flax, they grew corn, they grew apples, and they boasted of them all. The original Delicious apple tree, grandsire of millions of bushels of the best eating apples in America, still stands near Winterset, protected by a woven wire fence; it seems a pity that some commercial-minded apple distributor changed the name its discoverer gave it—Hawkeye—to Delicious. In Forest City you may see a portion of the vast Flax Palace once built to advertise Winnebago County's flax—a building 136 feet in length all covered with flax-heads in the 1880's; now only sugar beets and sweet corn grow in the neighborhood.

The Corn Palace of Sioux City, built in 1890, must have been the peak of Iowa's agricultural architecture. The Guide reproduces a picture of it, amazingly similar to the Church of St. Basil in the Red Square in Moscow. The huge building was entirely covered with sheaves of red, yellow and white corn in ingenious and diverse patterns; the domes were Moorish; inside was a reproduction of Millet's Angelus, made with colored corn and other grains. It was a famous structure in its day; and in 1889 a Corn Palace Train (the Guide does not go into details about its streamlining) toured the country to advertise Iowa products, stopping at Washington for the inauguration of President Harrison.

A Blow To Britain

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

The New Chinese Capital.

Special Correspondence to The Post.

Shanghai.

IN THE BITTER international struggle now being waged behind the sanguinary screen of the Sino-Japanese hostilities, Soviet Russia has just scored a momentous victory over Great Britain.

In the world press, this gain appeared in the form of a brief news item announcing the Chinese Government's decision to transfer its seat to Chungking, in the wild and wooly West, instead to Kunming, close to China's border with French Indo-China and India.

The significance of the decision may not be clear without a brief diversion into military geography. Thus far, foreign munitions poured into the country through British Hongkong, whence they reached the front in central China over the much-bombed Canton-Hankow Railway.

More recently, Hanoi and Haiphong in French Indo-China began to displace Hongkong as the chief ports of entry for China's military supplies. From Indo-China these elements of war were carried over a French-owned railway to Yunnan, China's southernmost province, and thence to the front by trucks traveling at night along newly-laid highways.

Still another motor road has now been completed to link British Burma with Yunnan. Built jointly by British and Chinese engineers, this highway will enable military supplies to reach Yunnan from Rangoon in eight days.

The fourth channel through which war materials, field guns and airplanes reached China was from Russia, across the Soviet-controlled Chinese province of Sinkiang, the barren Kansu, and thence across Shensi to Hankow.

• • • •

THIS NORTHWESTERN route, practically immune from Japanese aerial raiders, is a relatively well-surfaced military highway, built on Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's orders after the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese hostilities. As the flow of war supplies from Russia increased, the importance of this route rose proportionately. Eighty per cent of China's military aircraft and about a half of her tanks and field guns today come via this route.

If the current clashes along the Soviet-Korean border do not unexpectedly develop into a major holocaust, Hankow will fall before the advancing Nipponese war machine late in September, or early the following month. Looking ahead, the Chinese Government late in July began to cast about for its next seat. The choice lay between Chungking, in the west and close to the Russian arms route and Kunming, in the south and on the military roads from Indo-China and India.

In picking its next capital, the Government was clearly aware of the fact that its decision would determine the degree of influence one or another foreign power would play in the formulation of China's military and foreign polices, and to an extent, in fundamentally shaping the nation's destinies.

At first, about three months ago, the choice fell upon Kunming. France and Britain were intensely friendly to China. Japan was lustily treading upon John Bull's tender toes in the Orient, forcing London to lean toward China's support.

Moreover, next to Germany, Britain was China's main source of munitions and a possible creditor. Aware of the inherent antagonism between the British and Japanese interests in Asia, Hankow believed that it could count upon the wholehearted assistance of its great British friend. In harboring this belief, the Chinese government, however, ignored the recent gyrations of British diplomacy in the Pacific area and Premier Neville Chamberlain's political volte face in Europe.

• • • •

PERSISTENT RUMORS of an impending Anglo-Japanese understanding—and pressure apparently exerted by the Soviet government—finally brought Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and his government to a realization that the nation was pawning its future to Britain if sole reliance in war supplies were to be put on the latter country.

The Chinese government realized with a shock that by sending all its silver to London and virtually joining the sterling bloc, it had already given British diplomats a club with which China could at any moment be browbeaten into the acceptance of any peace scheme devised in London or Tokyo. With press reports and ambiguous official statements of British and Japanese officials feeding their suspicions, the Chinese had come to the conclusion that London was preparing the ground for a mediation scheme, in which China was to be the only loser.

Semiofficial press organs in Hankow predicted that London would propose to Tokyo its services in compelling China to accept peace terms dictated by Japan, on the condition that British interests in this country would be respected by the Nipponese victors.

If this assumption were true, the removal of the capital to Kunming, and the subsequent dependence on British money and munitions, would have been suicidal. Thus it was that the Chinese government suddenly and without much ado announced that its next seat was to be in Chungking, an overcrowded, dirty and inaccessible city in Szechuan Province.

By this decision the Government served notice on the capitals of the world that henceforth its greatest friend, counselor and source of munitions would be Soviet Russia.

The decision was logical. When the hostilities broke out, the Chinese government formulated a strategy based on the assumption that Japan would not be able to stand the strain of a protracted war.

• • • •

While Japan has not yet displayed any signs of an imminent collapse, there are definite indications of deep fissures in her economic and political structures. To end the war now would, therefore, benefit Japan alone. Peace on Japanese terms would undoubtedly mean complete subjection of this country to Nipponese task-masters.

Japan has paid too dearly for her year's adventure on the mainland, too much has been promised her people by their leaders to permit peace without victory. From the lowliest farmer to the army chiefs, everyone in Japan today craves for peace. But none would consent to the restoration of the status quo ante, if only for the resultant loss of national prestige.

That China would not agree to any humiliating peace terms has been repeatedly emphasized by her military leaders.

The only power potentially capable of compelling China to accept peace terms acceptable to Japan is Great Britain, which, if not today, three months ago was in complete control of this country's currency and military supplies.

Britain does not desire to see China become a part of the Japanese empire. Her investments in this country before the outbreak of the hostilities were estimated at about $2,000,000,000, and she will not allow their destruction without a great battle.

But neither do the canny British diplomats desire the complete exhaustion of the Japanese military might on the battlefields of China. While a powerful rival of the Albion in the Pacific, Nippon has also been in the past five or ten years a powerful check to the spread of Russia's influence. And to a Tory mind, a belligerent samurai is preferable to a Communist moujik.

• • • •

Japan's exhaustion in the current war would completely alter the balance of power in the Pacific area, bringing Soviet Russia, for the second time in less than two decades, face to face with Britain, anxious to maintain her vast colonial preserves.

It would thus obviously be to Britain's interest to intervene in the dispute at this time. Through its control of China's coffer and guns, London could force the Chinese government to make important concessions to Nippon, possibly including the retention of the newly established Japanese "development" companies and the stationing of garrisons in major Chinese cities.

As a compensation for her unselfish services, Britain would exact from Tokyo a pledge to respect her investments and rights in China and allow her financiers and industrialists to play a prominent role in China's rehabilitation.

The conflict would thus come to an end; Britain and Japan would begin an intensive exploitation of their spheres of influence, and the Chinese government would continue to rule, but over a greatly restricted area.

But such a peace would be a heavy blow to Russia. If Japan emerges out of the current undeclared war relatively unscathed, Nipponese troops will in a year or two launch a serious offensive across the very spot where Soviet and Japanese units have been fighting on a small scale a fortnight ago.

The Chinese government's removal to Chungking assures Russia that China will continue to resist Japanese aggression—with Soviet military and financial assistance. Thus, Nippon's rush toward an economic and political crisis will continue to gather momentum, and Britain's hard-won influence in China will begin to decline.

Inquiry Head Finds Integrity Of TVA Heads Above Question

Mead's Committee May Recommend Larger Directorate to Break Up 3-to-1 Division He Holds Caused Disputes Between Chairman, 2 Aides.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 28.—A hint has come from the Congressional TVA investigation that the inquisitors may recommend an executive board for TVA, in place of the original three-man directorate which was sundered by friction between the former chairman, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, and its two directors.

The hearings of the Congressional committee are to be resumed tomorrow, for concluding examination of Dr. Morgan over the marble leases by Senator Berry (Democrat), Tennessee, which became the crux of dissension between the chairman and his two associates, David E. Lilienthal, and Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan.

Just before conclusion of yesterday's session, Representative Mead (Democrat), New York, vice chairman of the committee, asked Dr. Morgan if differences did not grow out of an attempt to divide responsibility for various aspects of TVA among the three, and whether enlargement of the board to five members, with a chairman with no specific duties except policy making and co-ordination, would be advisable.

Dr. Morgan readily agreed a three-man board is prone to difficulty, because of personalities involved when two combine against one.

Despite charges and counter-charges tossed back and forth between the chairman and his associates, Mead concluded, "I would say the directors are of the highest degree of honesty and integrity," and indicated he felt the feud between them developed from fundamental differences of temperament.

After the inquiry into the Berry matter is finished, possibly tomorrow, the committee expects to take up additional aspects of TVA purchase of phosphate lands at a price of $680,000, giving the International Agricultural Corporation, of New York, a profit of $530,000.

30 Airports Built By CCC to Check Wilderness Fires

A little-known activity of the Civilian Conservation Corps was announced yesterday by Acting Director James J. McEntee, who said enrollees have built more than 30 airplane landing fields in the country's deep forests during the last five years to facilitate transportation of forest fire fighters and supplies.

The emergency landing fields have made it possible for fighters to rush by plane to fires in otherwise inaccessible sections, cutting down the destruction toll of the blazes and saving both time and effort.

Occasionally the fields, located principally in the national forests of the West, also prove useful to aviators who must make a forced landing.

Halt Indian Chaos, Roosevelt Asked

Philadelphia, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Indian Rights Association, through its president, J. M. Steere, made public today a letter addressed to President Roosevelt appealing for drastic correction in administration of the affairs of 50,000 Navajo Indians in New Mexico and Arizona.

"For over 40 years," the letter stated, "the Indian Rights Association has been in close touch with the affairs of the Navajos, and we note with regret that never, during that period, was there such a tragic situation as now exists—demoralization, chaos, a feeling of hopelessness, loss of confidence in the Government and fear of the future."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Influence Of The Hines Trial In The Home.

The scene is almost any home in which husband and wife have been reading the transcript of the proceedings daily.

Husband—I don't remember.

Wife—Well, give me your best recollection.

Husband—I object to giving you my best recollection.

Wife—Objection overruled!

Husband—Exception!

• • • •

Husband—But you've got to go about it in the proper way.

Wife—I did go about it the right way.

Husband—Repeat the question.

Wife—The question was, "Did you have a hard day?"

Husband—But be specific. What day are we referring to?

Wife—Today, of course. I wouldn't be asking you today if you had a hard day yesterday, would I?

Husband—Perhaps not, but for the purpose of the record we must be exact.

Wife (impatiently)—Very well, I will reframe the query. Did you have a hard day at the office today?

Husband—Well, I'll tell you. The boss was in one of those mean moods and . . .

Wife—Answer yes or no!

Husband—It wasn't exactly a hard day, but I had to check up on the inventories and . . .

Wife—We'll come to that later. Did you or did you not have a hard day?

Husband (resignedly)—Yes, I suppose so. What are we having for dinner?

Wife—That's immaterial, irrelevant and incompetent.

Wife—You haven't tied it up with anything.

Husband—I will tie it up later.

Wife—I'll admit the question with that understanding. We are having steak and onions.

Husband—I object to the onions.

Wife—Why, Gideon, we had onions two weeks ago Thursday and you raved about 'em!

Husband—Are you positive it was two weeks ago Thursday?

Wife—Of course.

Husband—How do you fix that date? And would you be surprised if I could show you that it was two weeks ago Friday?

Wife—Come to think of it, it was on a Wednesday.

Husband—I move to strike it out.

Wife—Strike what out?

Husband—Everything beginning with the word onion.

Wife—No, I think that since the matter has been introduced we should clear it up.

Husband—Okay. Then I insist we had onions two weeks ago Friday.

Wife—What would fix onions in your mind?

Husband—I never forget an onion. If it had been carrots, I could be wrong about the date. You can't break me down on that point.

• • • •

Wife (answering the telephone, and turning to him) — It's the Pruetts. They want to know if we'll play bridge tonight. But Mrs. Pruett's girl Sally is having some friends over and we played there last, and they want to know if it's all right to play at our house, and have we gin or will they bring some and when can . . .

Husband—That's a hypothetical question! If you simplify it I will consider its admissibility!

Maybe all unspeakable offenses against humanity should be labeled "Made in Japan."

Thurman Arnolds Visit G. H. Montagues in Maine

Angells, Rockefellers, Damrosches, Watsons Attend Dinner at 'Beaulieu' for D. C. Guests in Bar Harbor.

Add to the many Washingtonians vacationing at fashionable Seal Harbor, Me., the Assistant Attorney General, Thurman W. Arnold, and Mrs. Arnold. Mr. Arnold, much in the news as chief prosecutor and investigator of monopolies, is with Mrs. Arnold, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Montague, of New York and Washington.

The Montagues entertained for the Arnolds at a dinner Saturday evening at Beaulieu, their summer home in the Maine resort, among the dinner guests, many of whom drove over from nearby Bar Habor for the occasion, were Dr. James R. Angell, president emeritus of Yale University, and Mrs. Angell; Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Dr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Dr. Ernest M. Hopkins, president of Dartmouth College, and Mrs. Hopkins; Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, of Chicago; Col. E. M. Watson, military aide to the President, and Mrs. Watson, who are summering at Northeast Harbor, and Mrs. Charlton Yarnall, of Philadelphia.

Washingtonians Attend McMurtry Dance

As the season at Bar Harbor nears its climax, dinners and dances follow each other in dizzy succession. Maj. and Mrs. George G. McMurtry, who divide their time between New York and the Capital, were hosts Saturday evening at a dinner and dance at the Bar Harbor Club. Following the affair, one of the largest parties of the season, an exhibition of modern dance steps was given by a professional dance team. An orchestra imported from Boston furnished the music.

Guests included the military attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Wyndham Torr, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, and Gen. and Mrs. J. W. Kilbreth, all of Washington. Also Mr. and Mrs. William McNair, Mr. and Mrs. deForest Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Seward Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Timothee Adamowski, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Coxe, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hooper Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. George Batcheller, Mr. and Mrs. Tristram C. Colket, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Geary, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Munson, Mr. and Mrs. George Strawbridge, Mrs. John T. Dorrance, Miss Margaret Steward, and Campbell Steward.

Col. and Mrs. Torr were honored at a dinner given last week by William Pierson Hamilton, of New York and Santa Barbara, at his residence, Thirlstane House. Others in the company were Baron Mario Bucovich, who spent last winter here; Mr. and Mrs. Louis McL. Merryman, Mr. and Mrs. Redmond Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. N. Blair Pyle, Mrs. Thomas Dudley Palmer, and Richard Harwood. Mr. and Mrs. Merryman and Mr. Harwood flew up from Baltimore to act as officials of the Thirlstane Ranch field day, which was held Saturday. Col. Women Voters Plan Project Group Marks Social Security Anniversary With 'Go-See' Plan.

The National League of Women Voters is opening the fourth year under the social security program with a "GO . . . SEE PROJECT" on unemployment compensation.

Supporting the unemployment compensation provisions of the social security act, the league considers it "important that citizens be sympathetically aware of how their own State law is operating," since every State is experimenting with different types of laws and administrative procedures.

"Public understanding of the problems involved can give encouragement to making co-ordination workable between the unemployment compensation division and the employment service," said Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president. "An alert public can counteract misunderstandings about the operation of the law. Support from public opinion is needed on behalf of the merit system for selection and promotion of employes. An informed public can be of inestimable value in expressing opinions based on facts regarding proposed amendments to State unemployment compensation laws."

The league plan is for large groups of women to engage in local fact-finding on the workings of the various State unemployment compensation laws, these facts to be pooled for exchange of experiences in the Washington headquarters of the organization, to the end that public opinion may be brought to bear upon the successful conduct of the unemployment compensation program.

The chief problems to be covered are: The relation of unemployment compensation administration to the employment service, since it is vital that finding a job be a matter of active concern with the paying of unemployment benefits; personnel procedures; methods of collecting contributions and paying benefits; attitude of employers and employes; roles of advisory councils; relation of payment of unemployment compensation benefits to the relief load, and possible proposed changes in State laws and procedures.

'Immunize' Is Best Plan For School

Child Should Be Prepared to Resist Contagious Diseases.

Diphtheria Defense Is One of Most Important Measures.

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Once more the breath of fall is in the air, the haze hangs on the hill, the breezes rustling through the trees make a dry sound which hints that the sap of spring is gone from the leaves.

And there are other signs—returning vacationists bringing the young home from lake and mountain and seashore; wardrobes being prepared for the classroom; teachers bracing themselves for another session; textbooks making their appearance in the offing.

And so once more it becomes my duty—and I think it is the most important function of a column like this—to advise about the preparation of the child for the school year.

I often am asked to name the most important health rules. And my interlocutors are invariably surprised when, instead of outlining a course of prohibitions for diet and dress and recommendations for exercise and sleeping on porches, I say instead, "Immunization of the body against contagious diseases."

First Day Vital.

This is especially true of the very young. And to send a young child to school for the first time without immunization against diphtheria, is like sending him into a den of wild animals.

Contagious diseases flourish in crowds. That is, of course, nothing more than axiomatic. And contagious diseases are especially likely to attack the very young. Also axiomatic. But combine the two—the very young and the crowd—and you get the first days of school.

As time goes on we all develop immunity to the common diseases—sometimes by acquiring the disease itself (nearly every adult is immune to measles because nearly every adult had it when young), or by what is known as "contact" immunity. This may be explained by pointing out that a large group of human diseases are spread by carriers. Diphtheria is an example. Some people carry around diphtheria germs in the mouth or nose. They may be attentuated in virulence, and people associating with these people get small doses of the germs which they can kill off and gradually develop an immunity by contact.

Begin Early.

School contacts create a great many of the contact immunities in the children. In any fourth or fifth grade over half the pupils would be found immune to diphtheria, although they never had it. I am referring to the days before the widespread use of immunization by toxoid.

Nowadays we want to create immunity to diphtheria before the dangers of exposure have begun to operate. We do not want to wait for contact immunity to develop. How it should be done will be described in an article later in the week.

Those Touches That Bespeak Youth

CLOTHES that are young and gay hold the center of fashion interest right now with so many girls going off to college and others returning to the office in their after-vacation finery. The cheerful young woman above has cleverly emphasized her youth with a sailor type beret and a lapel pin that is bound to cause comment wherever she goes. The beret is of velvet with grosgrain ribbon band and loops and a silver ornament at the side. The pin is a cleverly carved horse's head of wood with gold harness and bridle.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 28.

NORMA SHEARER, star of the "Marie Antoinette," the let-them-eat-cake girl, wants a few things cleared up, and we'd better get it over with right here and now. She looked very lovely as she sat in her suite, completely surrounded by air-conditioning, and the $20,000 worth of diamonds, rubies and emeralds on the wrist represented a far hop for the little Toronto girl who came to this town with her mamma to model clothes. She wears her natural reddish brown hair in a page boy, complete with bangs, and looks mighty nice.

ALICE HUGHES.

But to deny the things our Norma wants denied.

1. She is not as rich as "they" say.
2. She is not as old as "they" say.
3. She is not a top power at her studio, owing to stock left by her brilliant and lamented husband, Irving Thalberg.

Not even Norma would deny that she is "well fixed," as we used to phrase it in Manchester. As for the age, guesses run as high as 38, but La Shearer puts the correct figure at 32. It's a mighty nice age, and I wish I were back there with the kids. Her stock, she says, has gone down, a quaint and disconcerting trick shares have, as we've all learned. And she denies with much heat that she flings much weight about the Metro lot where she has been starred for 12 years—"longer than any of them!" she says.

Of course she is ambitious. "I guess my ambition is to be the greatest motion picture actress in the world." And that's quite an ambition, for many of the girls are very good, indeed. So, of course, is Shearer. She'd like more money only for extensive travel, and a private charity.

A mighty nice woman, this Norma. Oh yes, her birthday is August 10, if you want to send her a pretty card, next year. And she weighs 120, if you care.

Fast Eating Inrceases Weight, Too Much Liquid Also Bad

Leaving the Table Before One Has That 'Full Feeling' Is Good Plan; Light Snacks Between Meals Also Helps.

By Ida Jean Kain.

"BUY IT, bolt it and beat it" seems to be the slogan of the lunch-hour crowd . . . and it makes for overweight. Fast eating always leads to overeating, for the feeble signal of your appetite that you have had enough is usually ignored in the rush to get your dessert and get out of there!

Once you acquire the habit of eating rapidly you put it into practice for all meals. And when you finish before the rest of the people at the table have really started, it never seems as if you have had very much food—no matter how much you eat. One optimistic reducer even had the idea that what she ate fast did not count quite as much.

For some reason, slow eating tricks the appetite into contentment with less food. Perhaps it is because you eat longer that you think you must be eating a great deal. Also, when you eat slowly it is easier to stop before you have had too much.

Bad Habits Pile Up.

One bad dietary habit seems to lead to another and in this case it is washing down the food with water, and that's no way to control your weight, either, for a large quantity of water with the meal increases the appetite. If you are serious about streamlining your figure, particularly in the midsection, you will stop eating fast and you will limit the liquid intake with meals to a total of 8 ounces. When you have coffee, or bouillon, never drink more than half a glass of water.

Overweights never can trust their appetites. If you want to find out whether you have really had enough food at the end of a meal that is adequate, try to tempt yourself with another helping of celery, a little more spinach, or some fruit. When all you want is something sweet, you have had plenty.

Another way to deal with a tricky appetite is to leave the table before you get that "nice full feeling." Enough is usually too much in your case, and as soon as your meal has had time to settle you will find that you no longer crave more food. Just 10 to 15 minutes away from the table is time enough to make this test.

Makes Dieting Easier.

Eating between meals make dieting easier and I am in favor of it. To keep from thinking about the next meal too often—and to keep from working up too strong an appetite—have a glass of skim milk or some fruit in the midmorning and a cup of hot tea or a glass of fruit juice in the midafternoon. These between-meal snacks add but few calories and keep your appetite under control.

Some of you have been asking for something drastic in the way of a diet . . . Well, how would you like to lose 10 pounds in 21 days? That is what you can do on the special diet to be given right after Labor Day, when the reducing season from Maine to California officially opens!

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Confronted by Prospect of Living With Son's Family, Elderly Woman Asks Advice, Encouragement.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman of 65 and have always led an active life and devoted all my time to the welfare and interests of my husband and children (a son and daughter). My husband, though still living, has been unable for years to provide for me, and has gone off to himself. My son has been giving me sufficient funds to allow me to live in a comfortable apartment, alone. Now, he says he can no longer do this, and that I must come to live with him.

• • • •

I can do anything I must do and will retire into my proper place if I go to his home. I will not interefere in any way with his wife or family affairs. But I fear that my very presence will disturb his wife, although she has no reason to dislike me. My children are middle-aged and their children are almost grown. They all love me but I know that neither my son or my daughter wants me to live with them. It will be toleration only. I am active and useful but I never did, and cannot work.

• • • •

What am I to do to save myself from being forced upon my children? I love them so much that I want to keep away from them, but they are not able to give me sufficient money so that I can live alone. Tell me what I must do. Or, at least, let me know that you understand my dilemma. Help me with this problem that confronts so many persons of my age.

LOVING MOTHER.

Test of Diplomacy.

DEAR LOVING MOTHER: Inasmuch as you entertain the fixed opinion, self-confessed, that you are utterly incapable of becoming even partially self-supporting at this late date, there is little you can do for yourself, or that another can do for you, to the end of saving you "from being forced upon (your) children." If you were physically sound and vigorous, mentally alert, socially resourceful and imaginatively adventurous, you might find another way out of your current dilemma, through taking stock of your talents and capabilities and devising a program for turning them to commercial account.

• • • •

I am not prepared to suggest the ways by which you might do this—for the reason that such endeavors must necessarily reflect special, individual initiative, and would have to be worked out with particular reference to the person's experience, environment and potential opportunities. Some women have turned their talents at cookery, candy making, home making, child management, writing, nursing, painting, etc., to financial advantage when their own children were grown and gone. A few years ago, a series of articles from the pen of Hope Ridings Miller, published on the woman's page of this newspaper, told the real life success stories of a number of women who, from necessity or ambition, devised careers for themselves in the years between the middle forties and middle sixties.

• • • •

However, since there seems to be no alternative, in your case, to living with your son's family, I suggest you fortify yourself for the ordeal by reading an article entitled, "I Am the Mother-in-Law in the Home," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post of September 18, 1937. You can find a copy of this issue on file at the Library of Congress, if not at the Public Library or one of its local branches. The author, writing anonymously in the first person, tells how she won through to happiness for herself, her daughter and her son-in-law, "when declining health and declining finances left me no alternative but to live with my daughter." After describing the "bitterness" and "foreboding" with which this prospect filled her, she recites in some detail her adventures in meeting the trying situation with such wisdom, diplomacy and enterprise as to become, finally, a prized addition to the family group.

Question of Etiquette.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I met a young man about a month ago, and we have been seeing each other just about every night ever since. So far, he has not once said anything about caring for me, other than as a friend, but he has been very attentive and is as fine a gentleman as I have ever known. With the least encouragement, I could care a lot for him.

• • • •

This is my problem: he has a birthday in mid-September and I am undecided as to whether to give him a present, considering the length of time I have known him. He has made mention of a pipe he saw in one of the stores here that he particularly liked. The price of it is $6. Would it be appropriate for me to give him the pipe as a birthday present? UNCERTAIN.

• • • •

What Moderns Say.

DEAR UNCERTAIN: My sleuths and operatives among the distinctly modern younger generation tell me with unanimous and astonished accord: "But, of course, tell her to give the man a gift, if he's been seeing her practically every night for a month. It must mean that he likes her a lot. And if he's been spending money on her, 'now is her chance to do something for him."

• • • •

"There's nothing compromising about a pipe as a gift," remarked a worldly-wise blonde. Whereupon, a ringletted brunette interposed the remark that the only risk you would be running, in making him a gift, would be the risk of making him "a trifle skittish." "Skittish?" we inquired. "Yes. He might think she had designs on him; was investing in him, so to speak," she explained. "Of course, it all depends on the person," she added. "In cases of this kind, I use my best judgment. If I like people a lot, and for very good reasons, I am likely to give them a gift on suitable occasions, without consulting a book on etiquette to learn whether it's being done this year." I think you can do no better than to follow her example.

EGG CROQUETTES WITH VEGETABLES.

For service of six this is an inexpensive and delicious method of preparing left-overs. Make a white sauce of 1½ tablespoons of butter, 3 tablespoons of flour, 1¼ cups of rich milk and a dash of salt and pepper. Add and mix in 4 hard-cooked eggs, diced; 4 tablespoons of chopped mushrooms and a few slices of left-over ham, salted tongue or other flavorful chopped meat. Spread out on a greased pan or platter, brush with 1 tablespoon of butter to keep from drying and set aside to stiffen, preferably overnight. Cut uniform pieces of the mixture and form into egg-shaped croquettes. Dip in 1 or 2 beaten eggs mixed with 1 tablespoon oil, then roll in sifted dry bread crumbs which have been slightly salted. Allow to stand until mixture has set. When just ready to be served, lay in frying basket and fry in deep fat until golden brown, then drain on absorbent paper. Slice tomatoes and season with a little French dressing, arrange on serving dish and on each slice lay a hot croquette. Between tomato slices add flowerets of cooked buttered cauliflower. Whole mushrooms sauted in butter may be added as a final garnish.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THE SQUIRE ON HIS ACRES.
Hyde Park, Aug. 29.

You can't blame Franklin Roosevelt for going into retreat at his old house on the Hudson as often as possible. There's an immense and eternal stability about his Dutchess County place, whether you call it farm or estate, that's conducive to meditation and repose.

He may go in a harassed reformer, but he must come out an undismayed American.

Franklin Roosevelt, Jr.

* * * *

. . . in and out

It's not exactly "retreat," either. There are always several cars parked in the wide graveled driveways as the pilgrims come and go.

I imagine the family seldom lunches or dines alone. . . . The main highway passes his gate; the Secret Service man there is often identifying men with appointments, while a group of tourists gape at the broad-brimmed State patrolman.

* * * *

Inside the low stone wall, behind which a minuteman would have to scrunch down for shelter, the farmhands are gathering Roosevelt hay in the meadows on each side of the private road. Then you pass the tall trees and shrubs which conceal the house and the man riding around on a small motorized lawn mower clipping the grass, beyond, on 3 or 4 acres of lawn.

* * * *

"—conducive to repose"

The President has just finished his lunch and is in his tiny study with a caller, just inside the small door which opens off the small porch on the side of the house away from the river. Outside this door hangs one of those electric gadgets which electrocutes bugs.

* * * *

This study is about twelve by twelve, the sort of a downstairs room a husband gets for his den when not much else can be done with it . . . It is jammed with glass-doored bookshelves against the walls. Among the books are some fishing reels . . . Beside the President's smallish desk on a shelf lies a copy of "Collier's" with son Jimmie's last magazine article about his income.

* * * *

On a table, on the floor and in corners lie bulky packages in wrapping paper . . . Ten men crowd this room more than a hundred crowd his White House office . . . There's a vase of white and red rosebuds on the desk . . . Son Franklin Junior is in and out of the office this day, in a tan gabardine suit; once Father Roosevelt turns to him for a geographical detail.

* * * *

This is not one of the glossy manors of the region. Stone and wood are well weathered. Over the front steps hangs an American flag, like yours on a legal holiday. There are four small palmettos in tubs. The house is long, parallel to the river, but not deep, and it faces the road, like a farmhouse, and not the river, like an estate.

"—scene at F. D. R.'s gate"

Outside at each corner of the house, one of the secret service men is stationed, and one at the front and rear; the same familiar, vigilant faces you see at the White House and on Presidential trains . . . mostly they sit on lawn chairs. The one behind the house can't see the river where it flows past the house, for there trees and a field intervene; there's little that's summer resorty in the setting.

* * * *

But he can see, small and distant on the opposite shore, the lawns and houses of Father Divine's new paradise, like a remote stage seen across an amphitheater. When Divine's angels are frolicking their dark faces may be seen distantly from the Roosevelts' windows, at their fried chicken and watermelon.

* * * *

The President is wearing a blue shirt, blue tie, tan-striped seersucker suit and black shoes and socks . . . He is leaning far back in the chair at his small desk . . . To the right of the house, behind a screen of tall shrubs, are the two vast old-fashioned stables, even bigger than Iowa barns and stables. In one are several horses (one called New Deal); it is almost as big as the house; the other has been converted to a six-car garage; there the White House cars are kept when he is here . . . His acres roll on across the road, uphill away from the river; and even to an Iowan his corn looks pretty good.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 28.—Appointment of Herbert Schwartz to the St. John's College faculty as tutor in charge of all musical activities under the school's new liberal arts program was announced today by Dean Scott Buchanan.

The appointment brought to seven the number of new processors on the faculty for the coming year.

Schwartz will come from the University of Chicago, where for the past two years he has been a member of the committee of liberal arts, a group that drew up St. John's "new program" based on some 120 "great books" on Western civilization.

He was graduated magna cum laude from the University of Michigan in 1929 and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi. He received his master's degree from Columbia University in 1932 and his doctorate from the same university in 1936.

Others previously appointed to the faculty were Ernest Midgette, William Gorman, Ray Wilburn and Edward Lathrop, in the "new program," and Ray Alleman and George Leckie under the elective program. Joseph G. Smith has been named laboratory machinist in the "new program."

Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's, Dean Buchanan, Schwartz and Charles Willis and R. Catesby Taliaferro, who were appointed to the faculty, worked together on the committee of liberal arts.

This group co-operated with Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago and now chairman of the St. John's Board of isitors and governors, in devising the school's new curriculum.

ROBERT L. ANDERSON.

Goolrick Hits Interference By President

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 28.—Election of Robert Lane Anderson, of Marion, son of the novelist, as president for the coming year, and an address by former State Senator C. O'Conor goolrick, in which he denounced Presidential interference in State primaries brought the convention of Virginia Young Democrats to a close yesterday.

Anderson, succeeding Harold Snead, of Henrico County, won over John T. Duval of loucester. When Anderson's victory appeared certain by a margin of about 800 to 500, the election was made unanimous on motion of the Gloucester candidate.

The convention adopted resolutions advocating restoration in the national Democratic convention of the rule requiring a two-thirds majority for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President, and praising President Roosevelt's leadership and commending the "earnestness of purpose" of Senators Byrd and Glass and the services of the State congressional delegation, Gov. Price and the General Assembly.

Among resolutions killed in the resolutions committee were proposals to put the Young Democrats on record as opposing a third term for President Roosevelt and opposing Federal officials' intervention in primaries.

Tydings-Lewis Senate Race Highlights Statewide Jobs Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—Seven Statewide contests—five Democratic and two Republican—and a series of Congressional fights which leave but one of the six districts labeled "no contest" will draw Maryland voters to the primary September 12.

Headlining the campaign is the re-election battle Senator Tydings is waging against two New Deal opponents, Representative Lewis, blessed by the White House, and Arthur E. Hungerford. Judge Oscar Leser, of Baltimore, and Galen L. Tait, Montgomery County are the Republican primary foes.

For Governor, four Democrats seek a majority of the 149 State convention votes, of which 75 are necessary to nomination. The candidates are Mayor Jackson, Baltimore; Attorney General O'Conor, Baltimore; State Comptroller Gordy, Salisbury, and State Senate President Sasscer, Upper Marlboro.

Republican gubernatorial candidates are Gov. Nice and State Senator Phoebus, of Somerset County.

Republicans supporting Gov. Nice are unopposed in the balloting for State comptroller, attorney general and clerk of the Court of Appeals, but Democrats have contests for each office.

P. Watson Webb, Cambridge publisher; J. Millard Tawes, of Crisfield, and Daniel Carroll, of Baltimore County, seek the Democratic nomination for comptroller. Webb is aligned with the O'Conor ticket; Tawes, with the Jackson slate, and Carroll is unaffiliated.

Four Democrats, Willis Jones, of Baltimore; Omar D. Crothers, jr., of Cecil County; John Gontrum, of Baltimore County, and William C. Walsh, of Allegany County, are candidates for attorney general.

A straight Jackson-O'Conor fight is slated in the race for the Democratic nomination for clerk of the Court of Appeals. The Jackson candidate, Incumbent James Young, of Allegany County, is opposed by the O'Conor choice, Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, also of Allegany County, only woman up for statewide office.

Republican candidates are Dr. W. R. Jack, Cecil County, for comptroller; Leo Weinberg, Frederick, for attorney general, and E. Ray Jones, Garrett County, for clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Gene Ford Coming Back Here As Capitol's Stage Director

By Gerald G. Gross.

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

GENE FORD is coming back. Loew's Capitol today announces that the strapping showman who has produced all of its six annual "Going Native" revues (including the one that closed a successful week's run last Thursday), is relinquishing his Loew-Metro radio duties to become supervising producer of the Capitol, Loew's Century, in Baltimore, and other theaters in the string's Eastern division which are planning to install vaudeville.

Mr. Ford's new assignment which he will assume immediately, with headquarters in Washington, calls for active supervision of the Capitol's stage shows, also the Century's, about 40 miles down the pike. The latter house, after two years on a straight screen policy, is now adding flesh and blood entertainment.

With that V-8 brain of his throbbing away behind that smiling countenance, Mr. Ford is expected to make revues along "Going Native" lines a more common occurrence along the 1300 block of F street. It is promised that his activities in booking stage attractions for the Capitol will further enhance the footlight reputation of that temple of amusement.

The holder of the new post left the Capitol about a year ago, after serving as its manager some two years, to become production chief of the Loew-Metro radio station WHN. Upon the word of Publicist Ray Bell, it took no little oratorical phenagling on the part of Divisional Manager Carter T. Barron to convince Joseph R. Vogel, Loew executive, that Gene's destiny lies in a theater rather than in a radio studio.

Former pianist, hoofer, stage manager, composer, theater manager and producer, his new position offers him one of his biggest opportunities and Mr. Ford's many Capital friends are already beginning to form a congratulatory line. Gene, his personable wife, Katherine (Kay), and their son, "Jiggsie," will set up housekeeping in Washington again soon.

And, just so that you may know, they will be four in the not so distant future.

Speaking of "Going Native," the Bell system issues still another interesting announcement, namely, that Helen Forrest, swing songstress on the Capitol's local-talent stage bill last week, preserved her lead in the popularity poll right down to the pay-off line and wins a vacation to Bermuda. Tops among the male performers, according to the patrons' ballots, was Wilbur Hall, "Alexandria Cowboy," who also will be rewarded with a Bermuda trip by the Ross Jewelry Co. Miss Forrest obtained 3,680 votes and her closest rival, Earline King, polled 2,436. Cowpuncher (Virginia style) Hall's name was written on 3,140 slips, heading Magician Milbourne Christopher (2,300) and Master of Ceremonies Lee Everett (2,100). Every member of the cast of 65 was remembered, to greater degree or less, by the cash customers who took the time to vote in the lobby—"vote" and "lobby," there's juxtaposition for you—after the performances. The Ross Jewelry Co. will conduct a drawing this week, the lucky Capitol male and female patrons (one each), whose names are drawn first, receiving a $100 Bulova watch apiece.

So Nelson B. Bell packed his toothbrush, mustache cup and Prince Albert, warned the office cat to behave in his absence and hoisted sail for Hains Point. As has been his wont these last four years, or approximately, he turned this department over to your truly for a fortnight with a soft prayer for our survival.

Until a little beyond Labor Day, then, while N. B. B. casts for tarpon, tuna, etc., at the Point, we shall try our best to keddy on.

Opening of the new Atlas Theater on Wednesday night at 1331 H street northeast will be attended by plenty of the old Elgar. ("Pomp and Circumstance," get it?) Swanky invitations are out not only for the formal dedication of the first motion-picture theater to be erected in the central Northeast area in more than a quarter century, but also for a reception to be held the same night from 10:30 p. m. to 1 a. m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Kogod, 1615 Buchanan street, northwest. The Atlas is a joint enterprise of Mr. Kogod, Max Burka and C. H. Olive, all prominent in the Capital's cinema circles. "Love Finds Andy Hardy" is the opening attraction at the new 1,000-seat picture house, designed by John J. Zink, of Baltimore. Charles Clark is manager. The orchestra music on opening night will be under direction of Leon Brusiloff.

A parting shot from N. B. B., the following being in the nature of a vacation-eve contribution by this pillar's regular conductor:

It was an intimate and delightfully informal midnight supper party that George Hall, conductor of the orchestra headlining this week's stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, Mrs. Hall and the cherubic Miss Dolly Dawn, youthful songstress with the band, unfurled in the rooms of the Variety Club of Washington, in the Willard Hotel, last Friday night and Saturday morning. The guests included the drama desks of the local press, executives of the Loew organization in the Capital and friends from as far away as Baltimore.

Something of Mr. Hall's musical background already has been revealed in this space, so we won't go into that again. What we will go into is the fact that Dolly Dawn in a comparatively few years has completely mastered the art of "selling" a song to her audience through a microphone. She is as adept at the "swingy" rhythms as she is in the rendition of the tender nuances of the sentimental ballads. And she likes to sing. According to Mr. Hall, she would stand out there in front of his band all day and sing for the fun of it, if he would let her. Unfortunately, he won't let her. But, even at that, it is as much fun to hear Dolly laugh as it is to listen to her sing. She has a high, chirping sort of laugh capable of setting off an entire roomful in high hilarity—whether there is anything to laugh at or not.

Dolly was discovered by George Hall singing with an obscure orchestra over in her native Jersey, when he was in need of a vocalist. He perceived in her precisely what he wanted—with a bit of polishing. So he kept her out of sight for weeks on end while he coached her into her present perfection. No wonder she calls him "Pops" and Mrs. Hall "Mom."

There was only one fly in the "erntment," to to speak, Friday night. Such a rapid conversational pace was set by Dolly and Eddie Sherwood, over from Baltimore for the occasion, with their smart-cracking and "double-talk" that no one remembered to ask Dolly to sing!

The "No Visitors" sign had to be hung on the door of Stage 22 at the Warner studios when scenes for "Four's a Crowd," which comes to the Earle Friday, were being shot there. Isolation of the principals—Errol Flynn, Rosalind Russell, Olivia de Havilland, Patric Knowles and Walter Connolly—was not the reason. Rather, it was 10 toy trains and 18 Great Danes utilized in the making of the comedy. The former, constituting a miniature railway system, were complete to the very last signal tower and grade crossing warning. As for the dogs—well, where won't crowds congregate about one Great Dane, not to mention a dozen and a half? When the curious became too thick on the setup went the "No Visitors" placard.

Rufus Blair, Paramount publicist out in Hollywood, writes to give this desk fair warning that an Ozark covered wagon drawn by a mule team may roll into this office 'most any day now.

Conceived as part of the exploitation campaign on Bob Burns' "The Arkansas Traveler," the wagon will traverse more than 3,500 miles in the South, East and Middle West. It left Little Rock Saturday a week ago, but there's no telling yet when it will be looking for an F street hitching post.

Little

"Mayerling," the much-discussed foreign-made picture that won a long-term Hollywood contract for Danielle Darrieux through the merit of her work opposite Charles Boyer, yesterday was revived as chief feature of the new week's bill at the Little Theater.

This is the film play dealing with the tragic mystery surrounding the life of a Hapsburg crown prince and his Viennese inamorata which was acclaimed the best imported picture of its season by the New York Critics Circle. This was a well-merited distinction, for "Mayerling" is a production of the first water, rich in color and variety of incident, splendidly acted and handsomely embellished and directed.

The opening sequences are devoted to the unhappy life—in and out of the royal palace—of young Archduke Rudolph of Austria, who, on a vagrant visit to the Prater in Vienna, espies an ingenuous and charming young woman with whom he falls immediately and desperately in love. Their marriage is forbidden by the Imperial court, prompted by a precious band of intriguers who always have made life unbearable for the Archduke. Thenceforward, the picture concerns itself with the events that for many years have comprised one of the major mysteries of European royalty.

Charles Boyer, as the Archduke, and Danielle Darrieaux, in the utterly sympathetic role of Baroness Marie Vetsera, combine generous talents that are admirably suited to the convincing interpretation of a story that has been skillfully devised for the screen. The eminent foreign cast is led by Vladimir Sokoloff, also now well known as an important figure in the American cinema. Anatole Litvak, the director, likewise has taken a prominent place in Hollywood, largely through his expert work on this engrossing subject.

The bill is augmented by the usual abbreviated features and a new issue of the picturized news events.

Gayety

Inaugurating a new film policy, the Gayety Theater yesterday reopened its doors with a double feature—"I Was a Captive of Nazi Germany"—which purports to be Isobel Lillian Steele's own story of her harrowing adventures in Hitlerland, and "Murder In the Red Barn," an English picturization of the blood and thunder melodrama made famous locally by the Roadside Players.

Miss Steele was page 1 news at the time of her expulsion from the Reich a few years ago, and the picture which relights the Gayety once again gets "behind the scenes" of her alleged persecution by the Nazis.

A California girl who went abroad to study violin, Miss Steele was arrested for espionage, and for months awaited, with dread, the trial that never took place. She reportedly was betrayed to the secret police by a German noblewoman.

"Murder In the Red Barn" calls for booes, hisses and cheers in its cinematic transfiguration, just as it did on the stage. The villain in the piece is Tod Slaughter, who, in the role of William Corder, gets his just deserts in the end as all villains are supposed to do.

Lew Ayres, Pie Baker of Yore, Happy on Alp

Star of 'All Quiet' Fondly Recalls Pastry Days and Kissing Garbo.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—On the top of Lookout Mountain, high above Hollywood and with a view of the Sierras and Catalina Island in the Pacific, is a small white house. We've wondered who lived in it—and envied him.

Today we learned that Lew Ayres is the owner of this, the highest house in Hollywood, and after an afternoon sitting with him on his front porch, we still envy him.

Even while we talked about his days in the pie factory and his earlier efforts as a sheep dip manufacturer, a friend of his flew by in a yellow airplane—close enough to throw a baseball—and shut off his motor an instant. The aviator shoupted greetinrs and Ayres shouted back.

We never knew a householder before who could hold a conversation, however brief, with passing airplane pilots.

"Every day the view is different," Ayres said. "And in the winter time when it rains, I'm actually in the clouds. It's like living inside a milk bottle."

On a Pie Diet.

Ayres, who kissed Greta Garbo in the first picture he ever made, who became a full-fledged star in "All Quiet on the Western Front" nine years ago, and who has been busy ever since, has had a strange career.

"The job I remember best was when I was assis'ant baker in a San Diego pie factory," he said. "I did most of the work fo' my boss, and after a few months of making 4,000 pies a day, I became a doggone good pie baker. I got to work at 4 a. m. and every day I had a couple of pies for breakfast. That didn't do my stomach any good.

"This was because everything that went into our pies was artificial. We had powdered egg whites and powdered yolks. We used powdered milk and some sort of patent shortening and all I can say is it's a wonder I still like pie."

When Lew quit school, he decided to take up music.

"I played the guitar and banjo in dance bands. I played first on the boats running up the coast and then in every saloon almost on the Mexican border.

Caught Kissing Garbo.

"Then I began playing in really good orchestras. We appeared in the Cocoanut Grove and the Trocadero and places like that and first thing I knew I was meeting movie actors. I wanted to be one myself, so I took to hanging around casting offices. I got my first job at the old Pathe studio, but never did anything but a bit.

"Then my boss moved over to Metro and I found myself playing the second lead in Greta Garbo's last silent picture, "The Kiss." The high point of the picture was when her husband found me kissing her. That was a moment!"

A year later Ayres reached the top as the star of "All Quiet" at Universal. He has been an actor ever since, except during an eight month interlude at Republic Studios, studying to be a director. He even directed a film called "Hearts in Bondage."

"And it's all fine," he said. "I'm enjoying life as an actor, all right, but eventually I'm going to be a director. There's no age limit on that. A director's head can be bald—all that counts is what's inside. In the case of an actor, the situation almost seems to be vice-versa."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug 28.

Jack Warner is trying to persuade Mrs. William B. Walrath, head of "The Cradle" in Evanston, Ill., to come to Hollywood and collaborate on a screen story based on her life's work—finding proper parents to adopt babies.

HEDDA HOPPER

You probably think it's easy to get a baby. You're wrong. Everything about the prospective parents is investigated. Sometimes it's months before they're accepted. Next to health, the most important thing is happiness in the homes the babies go into; that comes ahead of money and all other considerations.

"The Cradle" has become so popular that babies from there have found their way to every State in the Union. A Hollywood couple was divorced soon after they had made an adoption. "The Cradle" took the baby back and found another home for it.

Just remember this when you're knocking Hollywood.

W. G. Fields is searching madly for a new heckler for his picture "You Can't Be an Honest Man." Expert required. He's had veterans Baby LeRoy and Charlie McCarthy. It's interesting to note that Baby LeRoy is making his comeback in pictures—he's 5.

Henry Daniels, who doesn't like tennis and never plays it, was persuaded to make a fourth. He promptly fell down and broke his arm. And Bob Montgomery, after an automobile accident, had 11 stitches taken in his face. He won't be marred but his car was.

Martha Raye said to me: "You certainly fixed me up when you called me a well dressed woman. Things cost me four times as much since you made that rash statement—but now people notice more than my legs."

David Niven thought a cigarette girl at a night spot so cute he brought home 20 packages of cigarettes. He doesn't smoke.

Our producers have overlooked a happy hunting ground—Johannesburg, South Africa. Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon cleaned up down there. Many English stars are on their way to do likewise.

Sam, the barber, who's been with Darryl Zanuck ever since he was at Warners, had an invitation to return to that studio. Sam said, "Might consider it if you'll throw in three other barbers and Errol Flynn."

Seems I made a mistake when I wrote that Irene Castle hadn't received an invitation to the Tailwaggers Party. She did, but it arrived a day late—went to the studio Instead of the hotel. Irene and Bette Davis have never met, but when they do it will be a good thing for the dogs, and they'll have fun, too.

Those boys who drove here from Connecticut in a $90 car to get stars' signatures put on with white paint, will shellac it for exhibit at the World Fair.

J. P. McEvoy, who wrote a swell story on Walter Winchell, is in town writing up Darryl Zanuck.

Tallulah Bankhead gave a brilliant performance before a star studded audience in a new play which was minus.

Now, it's reported Charlie Chaplin is in Reno establishing residence. That divorce is having as many downs as the marriage.

Is Dorothy Lamour about to divorce Herbie Kay?

Basil Rathbone is talking long-term contract with Warners. Which is good news for us all. Basil can play anything, even those characters made famous by George Arliss. Wait till you see him as Louis Phillipe in "If I Were King." His wife didn't recognize him.

Those who say romance between Adrian and Janet Gaynor is a publicity stunt, couldn't have seen them together. If it's an act, they're giving the best performance I've ever witnessed. Why shouldn't they be in love? There are no laws against that yet.

"Marie Antoinette" won't bankrupt M.-G.-M., as the former queen did a nation, but Norma Shearer, in not being allowed to attend her own opening in New York, found herself in much the same position as Marie when she tried to remain at Versailles. With our fast shifting problems today, the time for such a picture is out of joint. Had Irving Thalberg lived, I'm certain he would never have made it. The New York critics haven't treated Norma harshly—they've crucified her. Why not put some of the blame where it belongs and not entirely on Norma's shoulders?

Trans-Lux

The safety driving campaign gets a substantial lift this week at the Trans-Lux Theater with the "March of Time" episode, "Man at the Wheel," dealing very effectively and interestingly with the subject, and Paramount News with specific and definite illustrations to solve the Nation's problem of unsafe highways.

Very amusing are the demonstrations—applause, etc.—aroused by the news shots of the President, Candidate Camp and Senator George, attempting to illustrate the voting trend in the primary battle. The Frank Hawks crack-up is another extraordinary flash among the news films which are in extra abundance this week. Lew Lehr is present, also are fashion shots of the latest coiffures and all current outstanding sport happenings. "Threat to Gibraltar" among the short subjects tells the story dramatically and pictorially of the complex political situation there. "Bit and Bridle" depicts that haven of the horse—Aiken, S. C.—and shows the noble animal in action in fox hunts and kindred thrills. The cartoon, "Cinderella Meets Fella," is highly amusing.

★★★ WASHINGTON: MONDAY, AUGUST 29, 1938 13

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 28.—Gad, but you Americans make a chap's bally head swim with your fancy nomenclature. And so terrifying, too. Docking at New York last week, it was positively breath-taking to read that some creature by the name of the Spasm was testifying against the Dutchman in your blarsted policy trial. And that Abbadabba was also a star witness.

POVICH.

And here in Chicago we learned from the newspapers that the Slinger would participate in some kind of an affair against the Whizzer on Wednesday night. Who in the world and what could they be, we wondered. Surely it couldn't be two of your notorious Chicago gunmen having it out in the municipal stadium and advertising it in advance. The authorities would certainly step in.

The Slinger and the Whizzer. For a moment it suggested your fascinating Buck Rogers comic strip come to life with their flying bells and their disintegrating rays that would melt an army. It was intriguing enough to investigate And what did we discover?

Tut, tut, that it would be a football game. And that the Slinger and the Whizzer are both honorable characters who, in fact, are not in the least crude persons, Why, we understand that the Whizzer is an exceedingly intellectual chap who soon will be one of our Rhodes scholars at Oxford. And that the Slinger is a soft-spoken boy from your great Texas plains and utterly harmless.

Just Sam and Byron.

We imagined, surely that they weren't named the Slinger and the Whizzer from birth, even allowing for you American's common weakness for fancy names. But it was some time before we could establish, with the aid of your Federal Bureau of Investigation, that the Slinger was known in early childhood as Samuel Adrian Baugh, and that the Whizzer had been christened Byron White.

We understand that the Slinger and the Whizzer will be accompanied on the field by several other chaps Wednesday night when mediators blow their whistles and announce that everything is in preparation for the ball game to start. But nobody seems to be paying any mind to the other chaps. This game, as we understand it, will be the Slinger vs. the Whizzer for the championship of something that isn't quite clear.

The Slinger's team is the Washington Redskins. The Whizzer's group is known as the College All Stars. Because of the Slinger, the Redskins are the favorites to win, we understand, but because of the Whizzer the College All Stars are apt to win. It is very confusing.

The Slinger is not a huge fellow. In fact we were quite startled to learn that he is the lightest man with the Redskins. They call him Slinger because he has a peculiar talent for slinging forward passes with amazing accuracy. "Slingin' Sammy" he is known to his intimates, but, of course, you Americans with your flair for the sinister simply call him the Slinger.

Whizzer Just Whizzes!

The Whizzer, as we understand it, does not throw forward passes, hence it would not be pertinent to call him the Slinger. The Whizer, we are informed, simply Whizzes. That is, he takes a football under his arm and dashes places much like a badly aimed skyrocket would whizz along the ground. Undoubtedly with great speed and a most disconcerting change of direction. Off that description, I do think they might have called him the Darter.* It seems so much more appropriate. But of course my ideas in the matter wouldn't count much. You have such experts over here.

It's not that the Whizzer is absolutely unable to throw forward passes, we learn. He simply does not have the Slinger's great knack for it. Undoubtedly the Whizzer may throw a few passes Wednesday night and perhaps the Slinger will attempt to run with the ball, but in the main they will attend, respectively, to running and passing.

Characteristically, you Americans have placed the Whizzer on the spot out here at Chicago. His reputation is not as well established as the Slinger's and Wednesday night will be his opportunity to take rank with the Slinger as one of the truly marvelous stars of football. The Whizzer has come here recommended as the equal of Slinger as a football asset.

The Slinger's reputation has already been clinched, they tell us. Last year he came to the game touted as the finest of all forward passers and he proceeded

Redskins Have as Much "College Spirit" as All-Stars, Baugh Says

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

Chicago, Aug. 28.—The old college spirit is supposed to be on the side of the College All-Stars when they play the Redskins at Soldiers Field Wednesday night, but I'll have to disagree about that.

I don't want to shock anybody, but if the score depends on the amount of spirit that the two teams will carry into that game, I think the Redskins will win it.

BAUGH.

One of the things about pro football that needs debunking is that the pros lose their team spirit and are interested chiefly in their pay checks. Well, I played three years with one of the best college teams in the country and against some of the best and I wouldn't say that college teams have exclusive rights to team spirit.

Professional players aren't the cold, mercenary fellows that they've been pictured. There's still a lot of the small boy in them and when that opening whistle blows the big idea is to win that ball game. And the chances are that there isn't so much of that petty jealousy among pro players as you'll find on a college team. The fellows are older and know that they have to take as well as give.

I don't mean that the College All-Stars will not show plenty of spirit Wednesday night. Of course they will. They're good football players or they wouldn't have been picked on that All-Star team. And if they didn't have plenty of natural spirit, they wouldn't be good football players. But what I do mean is that the Redskins won't be a disinterested gang.

I've been with clubs which have had their hearts set on winning certain games, but I've never seen a team that was so determined to win a game as the Redskins are to win this one. There are a couple of reasons besides the natural desire to win a ball game.

• • • •

The Redskins really have something to shoot for in that ball game Wednesday night. They had a great season last year, when they won the Eastern professional championship and then beat the Chicago Bears for the national title. Football writers around the country were saying that we Redskins were the best football team ever put together.

Well, the fellows like to think that. They're plenty proud to be playing on that kind of a team. It's something to tell your children about 10 or 20 years hence.

But there's one thing that the fellows realize is needed to clinch the reputation of the Redskins. And that is a victory over the College All-Stars Wednesday night. Don't forget, the pro champions haven't been able to beat the College All-Stars since the series was inaugurated four years ago. The pro team that can win the league championship and then go on to lick the Collegians is bound to be recognized as one of the really great football teams.

This may sound like the Redskins are sentimental. Well, they are in a sense. And no college club ever was more set on winning a ball game for its coach than the Redskins are for Ray Flaherty. He whipped this team together and made us champions. Flaherty wants that game Wednesday night, and the Redskins want to get it for him. George Marshall, the Redskins' owner, wants it, too, and we'd like to see him have it.

Anybody who ever doubted that the professional football players don't set great store by their victories ought to have seen the aftermath of that championship game at Chicago last December after we licked the Bears for the championship. With that title won, the Redskins cut up like 10-year-old kids, they were so happy. And, don't forget, the weather was so cold and the crowd was so slim that we were playing for peanuts. Our individual cuts out of the gate were less than our weekly salaries. But that made no difference to us. We had that title

• • • •

When I was in the College All-Stars' line-up last year, at Soldiers Field, I had an idea that we were going to meet a gang of rough, tough hombres who didn't have any spirit and were only playing for the dough. Well, five minutes after that opening whistle blew I discovered I was wrong about that.

I was never hit so hard in my life as I was hit by those Green Bay Packers that night. Talk about spirit, they had it. I never knew tacklers could be so vicious or that fellows could take football so seriously. Those Packers didn't trifle, I can tell you.

We beat 'em, of course, but I learned a few things about pro football that night. I learned that the pros play that game right up to the hilt and that college teams have no exclusive rights to team spirit.

By the end of that first quarter at Chicago, I had my doubts about the All-Stars' winning the game. But in the second half, I knew we would. The Packers were mighty tired in those last two quarters and we were running them ragged.

That's the big edge a college team has in these All-Star professional games at this stage of the season—condition. The college boys are younger and get into shape faster, and they have more fresh men sitting on the bench. Don't forget that the pros are limited to 30 players, while the colleges have a squad of 65.

But if I were the All-Stars I wouldn't be counting on any lack of condition on the part of the Redskins this year. I've never seen a team work so hard to get in shape. We won't have any excuses if we get licked. But I don't think that will happen.

Sammy Baugh's next article will appear on Wednesday.

Griffs Lack Punch With Men on Base

Mel Harder Is Touched for 13 Hits; Harris Chased by Ump.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Amid the riotous clatter of 13 perfectly legitimate hits and the bellowing of 12,000 customers, the Nats took it on the chin again yesterday, dropping a 6-to-5 decision to Cleveland in the first game of their final Eastern series.

They also lost their first-division rating, receding into the dank interior of the second group, a half game behind Detroit, which pulled up to fourth by virtue of a 4-to-3, 10-inning victory over the Red Sox.

Dirty Deal.

Bucky Harris also lost an argument with Umpire Steve Basil, who resented Harris' kicking dirt on the plate while the ump tried to dust it off in the eighth inning. Harris, in the beginning, didn't like a third strike Basil called on young Buddy Lewis which stifled a promising Washington rally. But that's getting ahead of the ball game.

It was the same old story yesterday, no pitching. Monte Weaver, who started for Washington, was as effective as a protest to Japan and was given the rest of the day off after allowing eight hits and five runs in three innings. Krakauskas and Kelley, who followed him to the hill, pitched effectively, although Kracky suffered a slight relapse in the sixth, which ultimately cost his mates the ball game.

He tried to throw a low, hard one by Earl Averill, and the Indian slugger whipped it over Sammy West's head in centerfield for a triple to open the fatal sixth. Then, with one down, Pytlak spanked a slow double down the rightfield foul line, scoring Averill with the deciding marker. Krakauskas, however, deserves credit for his work. He held the visitors to three hits in four innings, and fanned five before being removed for a pinchhitter in the eighth.

Waterloo in the Eighth.

That eighth, incidentally, was the high spot of the game and almost ended the teams tied up at six-all. Mr. Basil, who should be credited with an assist, came to Cleveland's aid, however, with an astigmatic peek at the last ball Harder elbowed toward Lewis, and the Nats were a beaten team.

Rick Ferrell opened the inning with a clean single, and went to third when Jimmy Wasdell, batting for Krakauskas, followed suit. But Case popped up to Trosky and Basil retired Lewis.

The Indians started in high gear and threatened to make a runaway of the afternoon in the very first inning when Lary banged Weaver's first pitch into rightfield for a double, and Cambell drove a triple to deep centerfield. Heath punched a single between Myer and Bonura, scoring Campbell. Averill fanned, but Trosky lofted a double down the leftfield line, only to be thrown out trying to stretch it into a triple.

Two triples and Buddy Lewis' error accounted for Cleveland's two runs in the third. With one out, Heath rapped a triple to right-centerfield, and Averill poked another to leftcenter. Trosky went down swinging before Pytlak smacked a hard bounder toward Lewis. Buddy miscued on the ball, Averill scored and the halfpint catcher was safe at first.

Bonura Tries Vainly.

Washington came back with a brace of runs in the second, got another in the sixth and two more in the seventh, but it simply wasn't their day. Zeke Bonura, the elephantine first baseman, had a bad day at bat despite the fact that he was meeting the ball solidly. Two of his lofty drives sailed high into leftfield, home-runs in the average park, only to fall short of home-runs by less than 10-feet.

Simmon's led off with a single in the second and moved to second when Myer beat out a slow roller to Lary at shortstop. Al made a nice play on West's fly to center, delaying his start until Averill made an easy relay to the bag. Ferrell walked, taking up the remaining standing room and Weaver flied out to left—the runners holding their bags.

It remained for George Case to provide the scoring punch, a well-hit single that almost seared Harder's britches as he droned through the box.

Myer's two-bagger and West's single accounted for Washington's lone-run in the sixth, and in the seventh they capitalized on singles by Case and Travis, between which was sandwiched a walk to Lewis.

Tom Henrich Hits Homers, Yankees Win

Champs Held to 4 Hits, But Beat Browns by 4 to 2.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 28.—The Yankees collected only four hits off Buck Newsom today, but two of them were homers by Tommy Henrich and the other two were doubles, so they won the ball game, handing the St. Louis Browns a 4-to-2 defeat.

The victory, coupled with Boston's defeat by Detroit, boosted the Yanks' American League lead to a mere 13 games.

Red Ruffing was tagged for a dozen hits, one of them Beau Bell's homer, but he was tight in the pinches and chalked up his nineteenth win on the season.

Henrich's homer in the first started the Yanks' scoring and his second round-tripper, in the fifth with one mate on base, put the game on ice. He whacked a double in the eighth, went to third on Buster Mills' error, and scored on an infield out. Joe DiMaggio got the only other Yankee hit, a two-bagger.

It was the second straight day in which Henrich had hit two homers in one game, and boosted his season total to 18.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—It was Connie Mack Day at Shibe Park today as his Athletics responded with a double victory over the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 4 and 7 to 2.

In the second game Bud Thomas held the Sox to seven scattered hits, while the A's piled up an early lead off Jack Knott to win easily.

National League Pennant Race

Dodgers Beat Pirates; Giants Defeat Reds

Brooklyn Takes Early Lead to Halt Leaders, 8-5.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 28.—Brooklyn's busy Dodgers shattered the Pittsburgh Pirates with six runs in the first two innings today and resisted subsequent uprisings to win, 8 to 5.

The Pirates' loss coupled with New York's victory at Cincinnati cut Pittsburgh's margin in the National League to 4½ games.

Big Russ Bauers started on the mound for the Pirates and forced in two runs with bases on balls before Joe Bowman was called in to relieve him.

This didn't delay the Dodgers, who piled on four additional runs in the second on two more walks and doubles by Goody Rosen, Cookie Lavagetto and Dolph Camilli.

It was a day for extra base hits, with Bill Brubaker hitting a two-run pinch homer for the Pirates to lead the way.

He replaced Gus Suhr when Manager Burleigh Grimes yanked fat Freddy Fitzsimmons with none out in the fifth, one on and a count of two balls and one strike on Suhr.

This caused Vito Tamulis, Fitzsimmons' successor, to be replaced after the next batter by Tot Pressnell, who held the Pirates scoreless thereafter and got credit for the victory. The Buccaneers' three other runs were spread one each in the first three innings.

The Dodgers reinforced their margin with a run in the fifth and again in the eighth innings, Camilli and Buddy Hassett each knocking triples and loping home on singles.

Part of the Pirates' trouble in the first frames was blamed on Woody Jensen, playing leftfield while John Rizzo is sick. He juggled Ernie Koy's single in the first inning and misjudged Rosen's long fly which went for a double to open the second.

Bruins Win 2 From Phils

Scores Are 6-5 and 3-1; Gain Ground.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—The Chicago Cubs swept their third doubleheader in eight days and crept within a half game of the second place New York Giants today by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 5 and 3 to 1.

Phil Cavarretta's single off Pete Sivess with two out and the bases loaded in the eleventh inning won the first game after the Phils had scored all their runs in routing Bill Lee in the second inning. Homers by Gil Brack and Maurie Arnovich and a triple by Bill Atwood featured the five-run assault.

In the nightcap, Vance Page scored his third win since reporting from Indianapolis a month ago, by holding the Phils to nine hits. The Cubs made only eight off two Phil hurlers, but two were triples by Augie Galan and Stan Hack and each led to a run.

Two 8-Round Bouts Headline Stadium Ring Card Tonight

The Punch Line...

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Almost any dawn now you can pick up your morning Post and read where Steve Mamakos, the Southwest kid with the castiron constitution, has lost a fight and been knocked out in the bargain. You will read how Steve walked into his opponent with customary disregard for said opponent's right hook and presently found himself in the wholesale canary business.

ATCHISON.

Incredible, you say. Perhaps, but the thought isn't as far fetched as you believe. Steve recently plunked down the initial outlay for an auto. Not a rattle trap with doors hanging by one hinge, fender dented and squeaky, and motor crusty with carbon—but a sleek, shiny Packard. Steve travels first class.

Mr. Dick Lamb, Steve's boss in the metal business, wanted the boy to start a trust fund with his ring earnings, and salt away his prize-ring purses for the inevitable rainy day, but Steve had other ideas about what to do with his hard-earned cash. He wanted a car—not for his own pleasure entirely, but a car he could take his mother and family on trips.

So Steve's earnings from the Abrams fight went into the car. A lot of additional kale will go into the car, too, for gasoline, oil, tires, etc., and maybe even a couple of parking tickets. We understand the traffic department has a fine disregard for ring reputations.

There's something about a car, especially the more expensive brands, that imbues one with a feeling of importance and a desire for high, comfortable living. It makes a fighter forget the hot, stuffy gym, long days of laborious toil, and it makes him want to forget the past and go on to a higher, better estate in life.

Fight managers say that when a boxer starts rolling around in limousines, he's signing his own death warrant. Autos soften 'em up for the tough, hungry kids who are glad to have a pair of good shoe soles under their feet It looks like Steve is going to go that way, too. After all, cars have ruined much better prospects.

Frankie Mann, the veteran promoter, has applied to the Virginia State Boxing Commission for permission to promote amateur matches at Boulevard Farms, on the Mount Vernon highway, beginning next month. Frankie has a large stable of simon-pures under his wing and possibly has chosen this method of bringing them along.

Doc Davis, an old-time ring fan, has the records of every fighter in the game over a couple of decades, and has data on more than 15,000 bouts.

All fighters are a trifle nervous when they climb into the ring for battle, as any who has donned the mittens for a professional fight will attest, but it's a rarity when you run across one who suffers most after its all over. We have three cases in mind.

We were talking with Harry Martin, one of the commission inspectors, about cuts and patches, etc., and he brought up the case of a boy who had a nasty gash over an eye and refused to let the doctor stitch it.

"In the ring," Harry said, "you couldn't frighten him with a machine gun. He took everything—including a couple of low blows and fought back like a wildcat, but the sight of the medico's needle floored him. He couldn't let the doc fix him up, for fear it would hurt too much."

That recalled the case of Armanda Sicilia, a rough and tumble lad who seems to mind nothing in actual combat, but who was extremely nervous about a gashed head after a recent bout. He, too, refused the physician's offer to stitch the wound, and insisted that it be taped instead.

Al Mancini, who suffered a couple of broken ribs in his last fight here with Augie Krol, of Baltimore, was positive he was going to leave this earth when they carted him off to the hospital. When he was fighting, however, those broken ribs didn't mean a thing.

Lee Tackles Feldman in One Battle

Cal Cagney and Mexican Meet in the Other; Johnson Here.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Lew Feldman, one-time uncrowned ruler of the lightweight division and still no tonic for sore eyes in the dueling pit, matches his artistic ringwork against the bull-like rushes of Paul Lee, perpetual motion personified, in an eight-round bout tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Supplanting the Joey Archibald—Tony Dupre match, originally scheduled tonight but shoved back to September 12 because of Archibald's illness, the fight is cofeatured with another eight-round brawl involving Cal Cagney and one Bobby Cortez, of Mexico.

For good measure the matchmaker has thrown in Jack Johnson, first colored heavyweight champion in history, as referee of two colored bouts—both of which promise to provide more action than a stray cat in a kennel. The card, devoid of outstanding talent with the lone exception of Feldman, nevertheless figures to appease the fans' craving for blood and thunder.

Feldman comes to town fresh from Henry Armstrong's training camp and with a sheaf of newspaper clippings that do nothing to discredit him as a top-flight 135-pounder. He gave the dusky dynamo fits in training, and in the opinions of some observers, stowed him up for the Ambers bout. Armstrong carried a momento of his training jousts with Lew into the ring with him that night, a nasty gash inside his mouth, ripped open by Feldman's consistent jabbing.

Four Recent Victories.

Lew has four consecutive victories to his credit, but his string of victims is much longer and much more impressive. He defeated Petey Sarron, Mike Belloise, Norment Quarles, Howard Scott, Charley Gomer, Eddie Zivic, Carl Guggino, Midget Wolgast and a bevy of smaller fry. Today he seems to be doing as well as ever.

Lee, who demonstrated his fear of no man in past matches here, all of which were pleasing performances, will be a worthy opponent for Jew.

Lee's boring-in, windmill style of fighting is in direct contrast to Feldman's classical stand-up-and box methods. Feldman is more of a picture-book gladiator, while Lee is a throwback to free-for-all days.

Feldman is an 8-to-5 choice over the Tennessee harmonica tooter, but the old adage, "Don't bet on fights," never rang truer than it does in this case. Lee can win, although he doesn't figure to outpoint the veteran.

Cagney Eyes Steve.

Cagney, getting around to the second eight-rounder, is angling for a return bout with Steve Mamakos, to whom he lost a hotly contested battle several weeks ago. The Italian belter had the satisfaction of dumping Steve three times during their hectic scrap, and feels confident that if he gets the southwest socker in a return bout he'll belt him out.

Cortez is a rough club fighter who has been campaigning around New York with better-than-average success and who should provide Cagney with a good workout. Cortez is supposed to carry a knockout wallop and can absorb a lot of punishment—a combination that augurs well for a hard fight.

Kid Howie, colored lightweight, faces a man-sized assignment in his six-round bout with Slugger White, but should win. Billy Banks, flashy colored bantamweight who made his professional debut not so long ago, takes on Willie Pitts, another local entry in another six-rounder.

Jerry Hall, the baby-face New York youngster who is rapidly winning a place in the hearts of District fans, boxes Marion Severino in a four, which completes the bill.

'Skins Coach Bans Public At Workouts

Cameramen, Fans Halted Yesterday's Session for 2 Hours.

By Shirley Povich.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Chicago today was offered its first and last look at the 1938 Washington Redskins until the referee toots his whistle at 8:30 Wednesday night.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty watched with undisguised disgust as hundreds of curious Chicago fans filtered into the stands at the practice field this afternoon and he heatedly announced that all future workouts would be held in the deepest secrecy.

The two squads will take the field Wednesday in the presence of a sell-out throng of 80,000 spectators. While Redskins went through their paces at Soldiers Field, scene of the batttle the Collegians under a staff of coaches headed by Bo McMillan, staged a long session at Northwestern Stadium.

With the privacy of their workouts interrupted, the Washington squad willingly submitted to being "mugged" by a corps of cameramen who took complete charge for nearly two hours. The night editions of Chicago newspapers were splattered with photos of Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Capt. Turk Edwards, and other leading lights of the Redskins in great profusion.

Chicago has been literally captivated by the prospect of a sensational battle between the Washington professional champions who beat their Chicago Bears for the title last December and the bignames of the college All-Stars led by Whizzer White and Corby Davis.

60,000 Seats Sold.

More than 60,000 of the 80,000 seats have already been sold and the prospect is that thousands will be turned away from the gates on Wednesday night. Choice seats, long since exhausted, are commanding fabulous prices from the few scalpers lucky enough to possess them and a pair of the best $3.30 seats will fetch $50 from the monied gentry.

Reports hardly comforting to Coach Flaherty reached him today. According to his Chicago friends, the College All-Stars who during the first two weeks of practice were a sluggish, lackadaisical outfit, are now a team transformed. With the addition of Whizzer White, who spent the first two weeks of the training season with the Pittsburgh Pirates, the All-Stars are now showing dash and fire. White has literally sparked the team into action and contributed a confidence that it formerly lacked.

Flaherty thus far has refused to give any inkling of the line-up which will start against the All-Stars but there is great doubt that he will trust any of his rookie talent at the opening whistle.

Krause at Fullback.

It has been learned reliably that stocky Max Krause, reserve fullback of last season, will be assigned the fullback post vacated by the famed Cliff Battles. That Flaherty will start Baugh is taken for granted. Quarterback Riley Smith and Blocking Back Ernie Pinckert, rugged veterans of the pro wars, will round out the starting backfield quartet. Don Irwin's knee injury virtually eliminates him as a starting member of the team.

Earlier indications that Flaherty would start Dick Tuckey, the newly styled Manhattan Madman, against the Collegians have not held up. Tuckey, the big, bruising star of the Redskins' scrimmages at their Ballston Camp, loomed as the most promising succesor to Batles, but Flaherty apparently is not classing him as a fullback.

In recent scrimmages and in today's brief practice, the Redskins' coach has been employing Tuckey as Baugh's substitute—as the man who will be the spearhead of both Flaherty apparently is not classing Baugh is not in the line-up.

As the Redkins and College All-Stars tapered off today for their battle on Wednesday night, a mysterious and foreboded note was injected into the proceedings.

Head Coach Bo McCMillan, of the College All-Stars, called the telephone at the team's headquarters at Northwestern University, heard an annonymous voice say:

"I have a complete list of the Redskins' plays. You can have 'em for $500."

McMillan expressed no interest in the offer and hung up.

Unhappiest of the Redskins is Don Irwin, whose knee injury may cause him to warm the bench most of Wednesday night. Irwin, who failed to win a place on the College All-Star team in 1935, is heart-sick at his present incapacity.

Sammy Baugh stepped on the scales today and discovered that he will probably be the lightest man on the field Wednesday night. Baugh, who weighs only 177 despite his 6 feet 2 inches, is 10 pounds lighter than last year. He blames his loss of weight on his summer of baseball.

Chicago betting commissioners have installed the Redskins as an 8-to-5 favorite over the All-Stars, but refuse to make any bets involving the concession of points to the Collegians' backers.

Asked to put a line-up on the field for the benefit of the photographers, Coach Flaherty trotted out a team composed of the following: Millner and Malone, ends; Edwards and Karcher, tackles; Olsen and Harber, guards; Carroll, center, and Baugh, Pinckert, Smith and Karmatie, backs.

Bunny Oakes, who coached Whizzer White at Colorado for three years, attended the All-Stars practice today and declared emphatically that "White is the best football player in the United States." We'll see about that Wednesday night.

'Dog Trainer' in Action

Betty Jeans meets Kurt von Brickley, this pup which is being trained for an obedience test. It looks as though Miss Jeans is trying to make the dog shake hands. Miss Jeans conducted a free class in dog training in the rear of the Shoreham Hotel yesterday afternoon.

Dear Al: Selections at Marlboro.

Jockey Don Meade may run into difficulties despite his reinstatement. A prominent New York turf official says Meade will not be allowed to ride in that State. However, several big stables are reported bidding for his services. The crowd wagered $102,000 at Marlboro on Saturday. The meeting will be the most profitable ever staged at the half-mile plant if the good weather continues. Rockingham Park is reported to be having its troubles. The track finished in the "red" on that last meeting. At Churchill Downs last spring, Apprentice Jockey Nunzio Pariso, a Buffalo, N. Y., boy, accepted his first mount. Now he is a sensation at Washington Park. A big Midwestern stable is going to sign him at a fancy figure, it is reported. Clocker Mike and his "Talk-a-Horse" invention did pretty well last week. Five horses told Mike (he says) that they were going to win and every one was trying as far as I could see. He had two long-shot winners, Boulderdam and Wahcoo, in addition to a second, a third and one out of the money. Mike put his earphone on yesterday and claimed to have held a long conversation with Shot Up. Mike quoted the horse as saying, "I liked the feel of the track in that race last week. That fifth race tomorrow looks good to me. If Johnny Shanks can get me away from the post on time, I'm going to be a tough horse to beat. I might not win, mind you, but those other nags are going to know they've been in a horse race." Mike's girl friend, Sally Sidesaddle, has been signed by me to add a feminine touch to this column. She has straw-colored hair, was raised on corn and her old man was bitten by a horsefly, all of which makes her a handicapper. Her message for today is: "I'm crazy over horses—and Mike." She picks Happy. BILL.

First race—Sumac likes this course and may win at the first asking over it. Seems nicely placed and I'm going to string along. Prince Khayyam has a fair figure and seems capable of taking second money. Ktwo is a possibility.

Second race—First Fling might have won that last with a better start. If away alertly, I expect a set of brackets. Jolly Feast was virtually left at the post last out and closed with a rush. Roman Boy has plenty of speed and is dangerous.

Third race—Cancel was blocked and knocked out of it the other day. With clear sailing this one may take the measure of Shaggy Ann. The latter has plenty of foot and must be respected. Best Policy has improved and could threaten even at this short route.

Fourth race—Miss Symphony, second on the also eligible list, has the speed of this party and needs only to get in action. Monocacy should go well on this soft course and is dangerous. Reigh Tetrarch is fit as hands make horses and is a threat.

Fifth race—Happy Chase needed that last and probably will be hard horse to beat even in this excellent company. Miss Epe gets a shift in the weights from Justa Gal and may turn the tables on the Waugh filly.

Sixth race—Chiliad has shown excellent form since coming back to the turf wars. Needs only to repeat that last. Magic Line is better than generally rated. White Sweets for the show award.

Seventh race—Chatterdoo sprinted and closed in excellent fashion the other day. Back at his real route, this one should score. Huppy ran an excellent race last week. Spotless to take a peep at the money.

Wiffy Cox, Al Treder Win Best Ball Event at Kenwood With 65

Washington Winner Over Army and Navy

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A four under par best ball of 65 by Wiffy Cox, Congressional pro, and Al Treder, Manor, bettered three other professional duos for top money as the Sunday afternoon exhibition matches were off to their delayed start yesterday at Kenwood before several hundred fans.

Host Mentor George Diffenbaugh and Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase, playing with the winners, finished second with a 67, with Mel Shorey, East Potomac, and Leo Walper a stroke back with 68s and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont, trailing with a 70.

Cox played the familiar layout in 67, two under regulation, with four birdies, two bogeys and a dozen pars. Treder helped on the fifth with a par, when Cox went over, and on the twelfth where he dropped a 20-foot birdie putt. The entire foursome started off with one overpar fives on the first hole but Cox's birdies on third, fourth and seventh helped the winners turn in 32. He dropped a 30-footer on ten for his fourth birdie in seven holes.

Diffenbaugh and Barnett needed a birdie on the last hole to tie but finished with a five to finish two strokes back. They had an out nine of 34 and 33 on the return trip. Shorey and Walper were out in 35 and back in 33 while the Spencer-Larkin due was 34—36.

Next Sunday's match at Indian Spring featuring Ed Oliver, the Mather exhibitions September 11-18 and the Maryland State Golf Association team championships the next three Sundays fill the card until October 16 when the mentors visit Tony Sylvester's Capital course. One of the players in yesterday's match will drop out, and Sylvester will take his place.

The eventual winners were two up and the half-way mark, lost the margin by the seventeenth but closed out the favored team on the final hole.

The defending champions, Tom Corwin and Walter Talkes, continued to win by one-sided margins as they trounced H. J. Abbott and J. R. Smith, 6 and 5. They will try to make it two years in a row against McBryde and Jones in the title match next Sunday.

Russ Hollebaugh finished with four consecutive 3s on the first nine, a par on six, eagle on seven, birdie on eight and par at the ninth. But a bad start netted a 36 for the nine.

OVERTON HAS 72.

Spencer Overton, Rolling Road's inventor-golfer, played the Congressional course in par of 72 to report the lowest score of the day among some 15 players that played practice rounds for the amateur qualifying rounds tomorrow.

Player Gets Assist On Rock Creek Ace

Joe Hayes, Rock Creek linksman, joined the Hole-in-One Club with an ace on the third hole of A course yesterday, but an unidentified player on the green must be credited with an assist.

Hayes' tee shot hit on the green, bounced once, hit the player waiting for Hayes to shoot on the knee, and trickled in the hole. E. W. Smith, R. W. Criswell and A. Pope witnessed the freak shot.

Peacocks Second In Father-Son Play

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—William H. and Eddie Johnston, the latter an 18-year-old member of the city's public links team, won the Maryland State Golf Association Father and Son championship today over the Hillendale course, scoring 34-42, 76.

The Johnstons were the only duo able to crack the 80 mark. Harry C. and Roger Peacock, favored entry from the Indian Spring Club, were second, a disastrous 44 on the second 9 spoiling their outgoing 37. The defending champions, James V. and Bobby Brownell, Manor, were next with 83.

Scores of other Washington teams included John R. and Dick Meyer, Manor, 86, and Ralph Quinter, sr. and jr., Chevy Chase, 93.

The tourney was played with the sons driving on the even holes and the Dads on the odd, and alternate shots thereafter until the hole was played out.

The winners birdied the first and ninth holes on the first 9 as they turned in 34, 1 under par, but despite a 42 on the back 9 won the event by a 5-stroke margin. Thirty-three teams competed.

Berwyn Captures Two.

The Berwyn Athletic Club won a twin bill over the Tucci Plumbers and Laconia Athletic Club yesterday in games played on the Berwyn diamond. The score of the first tilt was 8-4 and the second was 18-2.

Galesville and Norfolk Boats Feature Annapolis Regatta

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Aug. 28.—The msot largely attended regatta ever held by the Annaplois Yacht Club terminated this afternoon with a series of finely contested races in Annapolis Harbor and adjacent portions of the Chesapeake Bay. A brisk wind throughout the day insured good performances and skillful handling of the sailing craft.

The famous ocean racer Vamarie, now owned by the Naval Academy, was unable to overcome its 15-minute handicap in the 5-mile race over the outer course and was beaten by less than five minutes by the Tejeira, sailed by Theodore Hoster, of Gibson Island. The Vamarie, as yesterday, was piloted by Commander Leroy Vanderkoot, of the Navy.

A feature of the races was the success of the Norfolk, Va., boats in the moth classes, while the honors as a whole in the small craft races went to the skillful handlers from Galesville, Md.

Playground Net In Semifinals

Takoma and Burroughs each have representatives in both the junior and senior doubles semifinals of the playground tennis championship tournament which are scheduled today on the Chevy Chase courts.

The junior matches find Joe Hosick and Jim Rhodes, of Edgemoor, meeting Bud Edwards and Bernard Walchens, of Burroughs, at 11 a. m., and Bob Bensinger and Dick Bruce, of Takoma, opposing Mahom Sarelton and Joe Hall, of Garfield, at 2 p. m.

In the senior division, David Weatherbee and Don Breadbanner, of Happy Hollow, play Henry Lambert and Jack Walsh, of Burroughs, at 11 a. m., and John Hutchinson and Carl Maier, of Takoma, face Mike Nunez and Ken Dalby, of Palisades, at 2 p. m.

Bensinger holds the junior singles title of the playgrounds and Nunez holds the senior. Nunez and Dalby played as a team for Western High, interhigh net champions last season.

To Present Trophies.

French Lick, Ind., Aug. 28 (AP).—Thomas D. Taggart, southern Indiana sportsman, said tonight he would present trophies to low-shooting golfers who participate Friday and Saturday in the 36-hole golden jubilee tournament on the sporty hills and dales course at the Midwestern spa.

Two Tie for Cycle Title

McDougall, Cauffman to Race Sunday.

Buck McDougall and Bill Cauffman will meet at the Polo Field ratck in Potomac Park at 9 a. m. next Sunday to determine a winner of hte District of Columbia A. A. U. bike racing championship. Yesterday in two events, McDougall and Cauffman scored 8 points apiece, with both scoring one win and one second. In a field of 15 riders, McDougall and Cauffman stood out as they fought for the District crown. Not since the days when Robby Connor held the national championship against all comers has the District seen such intense rivalry.

In the first race of the day, a 5 mile event, Cauffman closed fast to score a win, with McDougall taking second and Quentin Miller third. Jimmy Strachen was fourth. Time, 13 minutes 17 4-5 seconds. In the 10-mile race, McDougall came down in front by a length, with Cauffman second, Francis Zimmerman third and Strachan again fourth. Time, 26 minutes 8 1-5 seconds.

Next Sunday, the events scheduled are a 1-mile and a 25-mile race. To the winner goes a trip, expenses paid, toChicago to compete in the National Championships to be held there on September 17-18. oBth riders rank well up nationally, and the entier bike racing fraternity is eyeing this sectional fight, for out of the welter of silk clad riders at the Polo Field next Sunday will come a rider who will be conceded to be an even-money favorite to return the National Championship to Washington.

McDougall already holds one national rating that many observers consider a greater honor than the A. A. U. championship. Sunday a week ago, he captured the championship of the Century Road Club of America in the national meet of that organization held in Baltimore. The C. R. C. of A. is composed of the top riders in the Nation, and to hold the championship of the club is considered tantamount to being national champion.

Organizing Again.

The National Capital Duckpin Bowling League is organizing for its thirtieth year. Last year's team captains and anyone interested in joining the league are requested to attend a meeting to be held tomorrow night at 7:30 at the Lucky Strike bowling alleys.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

The pace-making Zeke Bonura failed to land among the scorers in yesterday's Man of the Month tabulation, but virtually all other leaders added to their scores. The point distribution follows:

To George Case, three points for getting three hits, stealing a base and scoring a run.

To Al Simmons, two points for as many hits, one run, and some good fielding.

Ritzenberg Is Upset in Tennis Play

By Jack Munhall.

The elimination of Allie Ritzenberg, Federal Employee's champion, by veteran Rickey Willis and the double victories scored by second-seeded Hugh Lynch, fourth-seeded Ray Stocklinski and youthful Charley Channing co-featured yesterday's play in the Post-Middle Atlantic tennis championships at Edgemoor.

Ritzenberg's defeat, coming as it did in only the second, served to further emphasize the well-matched field in this annual tournament and also caused the spectators to contrast with delight the remarkable improvement being shown by the younger entries, particularly Channing and Billy Turner.

While the newly-crowned Government titleholder bowed to Willis, a battle-scarred campaigner as tennis goes, 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, Channing, tall, University of Virginia junior, polished off Ken Dalby, Western High ace, 6—1, 6—1, and DeWitt Smith, junior Davis Cupper, 6—2, 6—3. The twin triumphs jumped Channing into the quarter-final round with such select company as Lynch and Stocklinski.

Lynch Beats Owen.

Lynch, Middle Atlantic finalist to Dooly Mitchell last year, opened fire on the title Mitchell has forfeited by non-entry, by trimming Joe Owen, 6—1, 6—1, in the second round, and M. Martinez, 6—2, 6—2 in the third.

Stocklinski, Federal Employe's finalist, kept pace by bowling over George Botts, 6—1, 6—2, and Hugh Trigg, 6—1, 6—1. A step behind Ray were Barney Welsh, for six straight years District champion and No. 1 seeded player, and Tony Latona, the third-seeded star. Welsh defeated Austin Rice, 6—3, 6—1, while Latona spotted M. Erana a set and walloped him, 5—7, 6—0, 6—0.

The Ritzenberg-Willis and Turner-Pete Gartner matches were by far the closest and most thrilling of the afternoon. Ritzenberg, perhaps cocky after his titular march in the Government play which ended only Saturday, carelessly allowed Willis to overcome a 4-0 deficit in the first set and win it, 6—4.

Willis Consistend.

Then, reenforced by this "gift," Willis settled into his easy going, but consistent gait and refused to crack, finally capitalizing on Allie's errors to win the deciding set after dropping the second.

Turner, coming rapidly to challenge Davie Johnsen for junior supremacy fought unhill to beat the older, more wily Gartner. With their match even at the end of 2 sets, Turner apparently was on his way to a crushing defeat when Gartner quickly ran up a commanding 4-0 lead in the third. But here Turner called a halt, and as if only playing possum before, won six straight games and the match.

The doubles draw was made yesterday. Seeded were (1), Dooly Mitchell and Barney Walsh; (2), Lieuts. Bill, Howard and Jimmy Farrin; (3), Hugh Lynch and Oavie Johnsen, and (4), Bill Breese and Buddy Adair.

A rare doubles entry was a father and son combination—Lieut. Comdr. Godfrey and Bill Godfrey.

World Politics Check Rising Business Tide

Disturbing European Incidents Retard Prices of Securities.

By Edward H. Collins,
A Special Correspondent.

New York, Aug. 28.—Speaking broadly it would probably be a fair summation of the behavior of share prices last week to say that further business improvement was nullified by continued political uncertainty. Possibly this is an oversimplification of the situation; for there is still a good deal of controversy among market observers as to whether the rise in stock prices has or has not already discounted business betterment for some time ahead. Assuming, however, that in the recent two-month period in which the market has been moving sidewise, business has approximately caught up with it is seems clear that the chief week was a series of disturbing retarding influence on prices last European incidents any and all of them fraught with grave world political and economic implications.

Critical Developments.

Among these were: The rejection by Spain's Gen. Franco of the British proposal for the withdrawal of outsiders from the Spanish war zone; authoritative reports that Germany had sounded out Moscow, Bucharest and Belgrade as to their respective attitudes in case the Reich should interfere "to maintain order" in Czechoslovakia; a report that Moscow had replied, in effect, to this inquiry that such action would mean war; the proclamation by the Sudeten leader Henlein, authorizing his followers in Czechoslovakia to act "in self-defense;" and finally, the speech of Sir John Simon, chancellor of the British exchequer, at Lanark on Saturday, in which he reiterated an earlier warning (plainly directed at Chancellor Hitler) by Prime Minister Chamberlain that if war should come it would be impossible to say where it would end and what government might become involved."

It is at least conceivable that in the absence of the uncertainty created by such disturbing occurrences as these the stock market might have moved into new high ground for the last week. As it was, a second bullish upthrust within a month was halted just short of the high of the recovery move, 106.74, made on July 25. Most of the other important financial markets likewise closed from firm to higher for the week.

Government Aid.

The Government moved to the rescue of the sagging markets for cotton and grain during the week in a rather spectacular manner. On Saturday the Department of Agriculture announced that it would make loans on cotton at a basic rate of 8.30 cents a pound, and revised its lending rate on 1937 corn loans. A year ago the loan rate on corn was 50 cents a bushel. The rate on the new crop has been set at 57 cents, and this rate will be made applicable also to the renewal of loans on last year's corn. The full market effect of the announcement on the cotton and corn loans is yet to be measured.

More pointed than the new loan announcements was the decision, announced on Friday, to subsidize exports of wheat. The Surplus Commodities Corporation, under the new program, is authorized by Secretary Wallace to buy up grain, possibly in the amount of 100,000,000 bushels or more, in order to take up the price slack in the domestic market. The holdings of the corporation will subsequently be sold abroad, for whatever price they will fetch in the world market. Any loss sustained by this dumping operation will be met out of the resources of the corporation, which means, of course, by the taxpayer.

In resorting to the dumping of the surplus, Mr. Wallace is turning to a device which he, himself, has vigorously condemned in the past, and which to put it mildly, clearly disregards the professions of the State Department in its frequently reiterated "good neighbor" policy. For "dumping," like the quotas and tariffs against which the Administration so frequently inveighs, is, of course, outright economic guerilla warfare.

Wallace's Farm Program Runs Into a Snag, Babson Declares

With Wheat, Cotton and Corn at Low Prices, American Farmers, He Says, Are Losing Faith in the AAA.

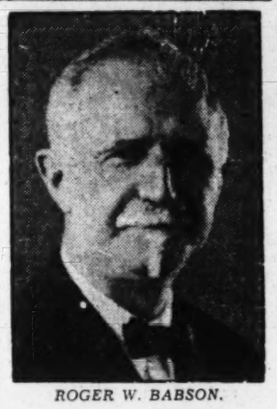
By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., Aug. 28.—Secretary Wallace and his aides in the Agricultural Department are unhappy with the way their farm program is going. Cotton prices are down below the loan point. With the exception of 1932-33, wheat prices are the lowest in 300 years. Corn prices are off 50 per cent from the 1937 level. As a result, farmers are losing faith in the whole AAA program. In fact, the brass hats at Washington are carefully avoiding a referendum on marketing quotas either for corn or for wheat. They fear that the New Deal farm program is failing.

Taxpayer's Headache.

Hence, many things will be done between now and election to window dress farm prices, at the expense of taxpayers. The promises already made will cost Uncle Sam about half a billion dollars with no beneficial results. Despite this huge outlay, the program only covers four major products whose share of total farm income is not more than 22 per cent. For instance, wheat normally contributes only 6 per cent and cotton only 10 per cent. This means that nearly 80 per cent of the total farm output is receiving no subsidies. Those farmers who are getting nothing, but who are helping to foot the tax bills, are unhappy.

Everyone recognizes that we have a real farm problem. Consumption has been declining and our exports have been falling. The result is that we have more farm products than we can use. Consequently, prices are very low. Meanwhile, union wages, rising taxes, and high tariffs have boosted industrial costs. Hence, the prices the farmer must pay have gone up while the prices he gets have gone down. In 1913 there was a good balance between agricultural and industrial prices. Today, however, the farmer's products will buy only 74 per cent as many industrial goods as they would buy 25 years ago. So a "farm program" is standard in every political platform.



ROGER W. BABSON.

Seven Major Remedies.

The various remedies proposed by both Democrats and Republicans over the past few years can be boiled down into the following:

1. Regain our foreign markets: Secretary Hull is working hard along this line. Secretary Wallace has also just come out with a plan to subsidize the sale of our wheat abroad. But if we want foreign nations to purchase more of our farm goods, we must buy more of their industrial goods so they can pay us. Lowering tariffs brings a terrible howl from manufacturers; while getting foreigners to buy again is easier said than done. Many nations, who were formerly not raising cotton or wheat, are now doing it satisfactorily.

2. Reduce farm operating costs: One way is to cut farmers' real estate taxes. Another is to stop the squandering of public funds so that industrial taxes will be lower. This plan also involves reducing factory wages and passing along both tax and wage savings by lowering the price of things the farmer must buy. Such a program, however, is not popular with the politicians.

3. Make farming a mode of living: I have always felt that farming should be a mode of living. Our farm problem became acute when people tried to turn farming into a "big business." Much of the complaint comes from those who raise only one crop, and who do not try to be self-sufficient. Encouraging people to live on their farms, to raise their own chickens, eggs and vegetables, and to diversify their crops is a sound, but long-range method of attack.

Propping Prices.

4. Support prices artificially: Under former President Hoover we had a farm board which squandered millions of dollars in trying to prop the price of wheat. Now we are working on a program which is just the old idea dressed up in a new bib and tucker. As a result of it, the Federal Government already owns 7,000,000 bales of cotton—a full year's supply. Furthermore, if we support the price of cotton, we ought to support the price of beef, popcorn and eggplant. Can the Federal Government ever be successful in pegging the price of hundreds of products raised on 7,000,000 farms?

5. Help families to move away from poor soil: Some farm economists ask why should we spend billions of dollars lifting prices so marginal farmers can survive. Why not just help those families who are living on poor soil to get off it? But where will they go? There are no jobs in the cities. Furthermore, it is easier to give these marginal farmers relief on their farms than it is to take care of them as jobless in the cities.

Economics.

6. Take politics out of the farm problem: Many believe that the farm problem will begin to get better the minute the Federal Government pulls its finger out of the pie. Then those farmers who cannot make a living will be forced to get off their farms ad eventually find a new livelihood. Over a period this would probably solve the problem, but it would mean a lot of human suffering. Moreover, while this natural remedy was being applied, it would hurt everyone. We cannot have prosperity in the city without prosperity on the farm.

7. Use of farm products in industry: We cannot cut down the supply of farm products without turning everything upside down. Instead of working on a theory of making farm products scarce, let us work to increase the demand. Chemists can solve the farm problem far more quickly than can our politicians. Every day new uses for farm products are being found. Now they are making roads from cotton; wool from milk; automobile parts from soybeans; motor fuel from corn. Over a long period of time, these and other new processes could increase the demand to equal the supply.

Unselfishness.

Most people that I talk with have a bug on one of the seven plans. I feel, however, that it is not a question of deciding which is the best of the cures. There is no short cut to remedying a situation that has been 30 years developing. My opinion is that the solution of the farm problem is to work along all seven lines of endeavor. Moreover, this farm problem of ours is more a spiritual problem than an economic problem. This means that all sections and all classes must be willing to make some sacrifices for the general welfare.

Steel Output Increases for Seventh Week

Steady Demand Carries Operating Rate Up to 43.5 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—A steady increase in the buying of steel by miscellaneous consumers provides hope that the impending demand from automotive sources will result in much improved fall operations in the steel industry, the magazine Steel said today.

The national operating rate advanced 2 points to 43.5 per cent of capacity last week, the magazine said, the seventh consecutive weekly increase from 24 per cent.

The increased buying by miscellaneous users is "contrary to usual seasonal trends and is developing without assistance from the automotive and railroad industries, usually strong supporters," Steel said.

"Inasmuch as current buying has caused production to move well above 40 per cent of capacity steel makers believe impending demand from automotive sources and continued expansion of construction activity will result in much higher operations during the fall.

PWA Projects.

"Unusually rapid progress is being made in bringing PWA projects to the bidding stage, in order to hasten employment. This program involves a large aggregate tonnage of steel which is expected to be on mill books before cold weather. It seems inevitable that railroads, which have held buying to a minimum, will be forced into the market before the end of the year for steel to cover repair programs and perhaps some additional rolling stock." As the Pittsburgh district gained 3 points last week to increase operations to 33 per cent, Chicago gained 1.5 to 37.5; Youngstown 2, to 43; Buffalo 2.5, to 46.5; Detroit 8, to 60. Wheeling was unchanged at 54. Eastern Pennsylvania at 30. Birmingham at 53. New England at 50 and Cincinnati at 65. St. Louis dropped 3 points, to 33, and Cleveland 2, to 41.

Steel's composite for steelmaking scrap declined 4 cents, to $14.25; the iron and steel composite rose 1 cent, to $36.50, and the finished steel composite remained steady at $57.20.

Lumber Shipments 65 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended August 20, 1938, stood at 68 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 65 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 64 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments, about 64 per cent of that week's shipments; new orders about 62 per cent of that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Bank Stocks Lower, Insurance Higher

New York, Aug. 28.—Prices of New York City bank stocks moved fractionally lower during the past week according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, specialists in bank and insurance stocks. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on August 26 was $1,307,385,000 compared with $1,319,934,000 at the close of the previous week, a decline of $12,549,000, or 0.95 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market continued to show improvement during the past week The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on August 26 was $580,673,000 compared with $576,023,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $4,650,000, or 0.81 per cent.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Just Suppose.

Each has his own peculiar needs,
Demands of which he always heeds.
—Old Mother Nature.

Teeny Weeny the Shrew was in a bad temper. His temper is none too good at any time, but now it was worse than usual. You see, he was a prisoner, and never before in his life had he been a prisoner. He was in a glass jar and he didn't know what to make of this smooth, endless wall. The smallest animal with the biggest appetite the Old Naturalist had called Teeny Weeny, and had explained that he probably ate his own weight in food every 24 hours and with nothing at all to eat might starve to death in less than that time.

"Just suppose," said Sue, "that he was as big as a lion or a tiger."

"That isn't at all pleasant to suppose," replied the Old Naturalist. "The mere suggestion gives me the shivers. As big as that, and with such an appetite as he now has, he would be the most terrible creature that ever lived. Compared with him a lion or a tiger would be quite harmless."

"Just suppose we had to eat our own weight in food every day," said Sammy.

"I guess the world would come to an end pretty quick if everybody had to do that, for there wouldn't be food enough to last hardly any time at all," said Tommy.

"Just suppose he was as big as a whale," said Sammy.

The Old Naturalist laughed. "Suppose we stop supposing and just consider Teeny Weeny as he is," said he. "He is more marvelous as he is than he possibly could be if he were as big as you have been supposing him to be. See what a mite of a fellow he is, yet he has bones and muscles and all the organs that bigger animals have, and he eats, drinks, sleeps, hunts for his food, fights and avoids his enemies. In short, he lives just as other animals do, and yet he is so small that he probably weighs less than 50 grains, and, you know, a grain is only one 7,000th part of a pound. Just to give you a real idea of how small he is, just suppose you were going to buy a pound of Shrews and that each one weighed 40 grains. How many would you get?"

Tommy produced a stub of a pencil and for a minute there was silence while he figured. There was a funny look on his face as he replied, "175."

Teeny Weeny Shrew was in a bad temper.

"That depends on the knid of a whale," replied the Old Naturalist. "You know there are whales and whales. Some are very, very much larger than others."

"How big is the biggest one?" Sue wanted to know.

"That would be hard to tell," was the reply. "The Blue whale, also called Sulphur-bottom whale, is the largest of all the whales. In fact, it is the largest of all animals living now, and perhaps the largest that ever has lived. It has been taken 103 feet long, but when it comes to weight that is chiefly a matter of estimate. Knowing the measurements and from these figuring the displacement in the water, it has been estimated that one of the size mentioned would weigh well over 100 tons. I might possibly go as high as between 125 and 150 tons."

Everybody laughed, and the eyes of the Old Naturalist twinkled. "Suppose you work that out," said he. "We'll say that a shrew weighs 40 grains, and for convenience in figuring, we'll pick a big whale and say that it weighs 150 tons. A grain is a 7,000th part of a pound, and there are 2,000 pounds in a ton. How many shrews would it require to equal a whale? And while you are working out the problem just keep in mind that both are animals, each as perfect as the other, a very wonderful thought when you compare them for size."

Tommy, Sue and Sammy were soon busy with pencils and paper. Why don't you join them in working out that little problem? The answer will give you something to think about, especially when you consider the amazing appetite of the shrew.

Big Red Cross Pageant to Be Held Tonight

Show Portrays World-wide Activities; Presented by Local Groups.

World-wide activities of the Red Cross will be dramatized in a pageant entitled "Mr. Public Decides," to be given at 8:30 tonight at the Shoreham Hotel before Red Cross workers attending the Eastern Area conference here.

Members of the local Red Cross Roll Call organization also will present a "model" program for clubs and groups participating in the campaign which opens September 26.

A typical Chinese family amidst the desolation of the current Far Eastern war will be portrayed in one scene of the dramatic presentation by Chinese actors in their native dress. Another scene is laid in the flood-stricken Ohio Valley.

Commentators will relate the story of the Red Cross while actors from the Civic Theater join volunteer Red Cross workers on the stage. A Red Cross safety film, "Why Not Live," will conclude the program.

Bob Burns Says—

A lot of people have asked me if I would like to go back over the ground I have covered so I could do some things differn't. I guess I'm a whole lot like my Uncle Hod. He says, "The most timid animal in the world is the rabbit and he back-tracks." Uncle Hod wouldn't cage anything for anybody. He simply says, "Here it is and you can make the most of it."

One day when he was awfully tired, he walked into a barber shop and slumped down in the chair and says, "Give me a shave." The barber looked at him and says, "You're slumped down too far in the chair for me to shave you." Without movin', Uncle Hod says, "All right, then—gimme a haircut!"

Radio Stations Behind Lines of Foe Aid China

Chiang Leads 280,000 Farm-Guerrillas Over Air in Hopeh and Shansi.

By the Associated Press.

Sian, Shensi Province (by courier to Hankow), Aug. 28.—Here in North China, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is believed to be operating the world's first "government by radio."

More than 60 military radio stations are operating in the nominally Japanese-controlled provinces of Hopeh and Shansi, sending and receiving political orders from the head of the Central Chinese government.

Through these stations Chiang Kai-shek directs an undercover army of Chinese guerrillas, who farm by day and fight by night.

Leaders of 16 guerrilla armies say their rolls include 280,000 farmers equipped for the most part with rusty carbines and hand grenades. Some have a few pieces of artillery, mortars and steel helmets.

Thirty village arsenals in Hopeh and Shansi are producing grenades from scrap iron and homemade gunpowder.

Gen. Chu Teh, commander of China's Communist armies, said the Chinese mobile units supplied with food and ammunition from the village arsenals could continue to resist the Japanese for at least ten years.

"In China the Japanese have no front lines," the general said, "only a spider web of railroads and large cities, leaving the countryside under Chinese control."

Chu Teh compared the situation to a hypothetical invasion of the United States, in which an alien army occupied the northern and southern Pacific railroads permitting Americans to maneuver between them.

In the northern Chinese provinces nominally controlled by the Japanese, Chu Teh said Japanese hold 2,300 miles of railroads and that "their authority extends no further than their cannon fire." This, he said, leaves more than 500,000 Chinese soldiers and armed partisans to operate in the hinterland.

The railroads, he said, were not essential to this predominantly agricultural area, while on the other hand they were useless commercially to Japan without trade from the countryside.

The rural governments, schools, postoffices, banks and long-distance telephones are functioning under officials directed by radio by the Chinese central government.

3d High Chief Dies In Tibet, Starting Fight for Control

Shanghai, Aug. 28 (AP).—New complications in the tangled affairs of the "forbidden land" of Tibet were reported today in advices from foreign missionaries on the Tibetan border.

They reported the death of the Jaltsab, or regent, through whom the Dalai Lama, or political pontiff of Tibet, acted.

Tibet thus is without three key figures. The thirteenth Dalai Lama died in 1933, the Panchen Lama, who ranked as spiritual ruler but who had been in exile since 1924, died in November, 1937.

The Jaltsab's death, the missionaries reported, precipitated a continuing struggle for domination of the country among the gurda, or landed gentry, the Young Tibetan Party, the heads of three large monasteries near Lhasa, Tibetan capital, and the army.

Hogan Names Bar Committee Chief

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, newly elected president of the American Bar Association, through headquarters here today announced appointment of former Judge William L. Ransom, of New York, as head of the committee on labor, employment and social security.

Hogan said that in his selection of Judge Ransom and the other members of this committee he was seeking to name a committee that would take a forward-looking view of law in relation to labor problems.

Other members of the committee include Henry Epstein, solicitor general of the State of New York; Hedley V. Richardson, of Detroit; Herman L. Ekern, of Chicago, and Clif Langsdale, of Kansas City. Ekern, when a resident of Wisconsin, pioneered in that State's labor laws.

5 Lone Women's Fight in China Against Cholera Revealed Here

Missionary Writes Her Father of Struggle to Save Sick.

MISS KATHERYNE THOMPSON.

Heroism of five women who alone battled the ravages of a cholera epidemic that struck their station in the Chinese interior, was revealed yesterday in a letter from a missionary teacher to her father here.

The message, dated July 21, was written by Miss Katheryne L. Thompson, Southern Presbyterian Mission teacher, to her father, S. A. Thompson, of 5236 Illinois avenue northwest.

Miss Thompson, 49, who has served for the past 15 years in China, was stationed at Kiangyin, about 80 miles from Shanghai near the Yangtze River. When Japanese armies neared that city last November, she, with three other Americans and some 30 Chinese took to houseboats, on which they lived until June. Then they set up new quarters in Tsiao Tien, 10 miles away.

In a small bare room, lighted at night only by lanterns, a clinic was established. The two doctors were both called away, leaving Miss Thompson, another American teacher, and three nurses to handle any emergency.

The emergency proved to be a violent outbreak of cholera, with the five women treating 90 to 100 patients a day. Miss Thompson vividly describes the scene:

"It was a pitiful procession that came seeking protection from the dread disease — some decently clothed, some in filthy beggar's rags; men, women, round-eyed overawed children, and tottering oldsters, frantically clutching for a few more days of a life that would hardly seem to be worth living.

"One man had been sick for 24 hours before he was brought in. His hands and feet were badly shrunken and he was at the point of death. He was given a huge quantity of saline solution and liberal amounts of atropine and morphine, and was literally drawn out of the grave.

"Most of those who are sick are brought in on doors; some on the wicker trays used for silk worms; and some on the backs of men."

Miss Thompson also wrote that she has adopted a five-year-old Chinese girl, cast adrift by a "she-devil" mother. She has been named Von Ing, which means "promised as an offering to God."

Japan Retreats Above Yangtze, Enemy Asserts

By the United Press.

Hankow (Monday), Aug. 28.—The Chinese Central News Agency said today Chinese troops had reoccupied Susung, 110 miles east of Hankow north of the Yangtze River. It said Japanese troops were moving eastward or away from Hankow on a broad front, "indicating collapse of Japanese lines on the north bank of the Yangtze."

The Chinese high command in Hankow, in a desperate effort to stop mechanized Japanese armies driving on the provisional national Capital, was reported earlier today to have thrown more than 25,000 women soldiers into the great battle of the middle Yangtze Valley on which the fate of the Hankow area depends.

Chinese Counter Attack.

The women spurred weary Chinese troops to vigorous counter-attacks and Hankow claimed a number of positions were recaptured from the Japanese." Despite their efforts, however, Japan's vast superiority in the air, in artillery, in warships, and in tactics enabled her forces to gain three new key positions and strike nearer to the vital railways north and south of the Chinese capital.

Two Japanese armies driving toward the Peiping-Hankow railway north of Hankow captured Liuan, chief Chinese defense position west of the rail line, late yesterday while to the southward the Japanese slowly were closing in on Nanchang, from which they will strike westward toward the Hankow-Canton railway.

Air Line Service Halted.

The last of Hankow's regular communications to north and south China were severed when the German-controlled Eurasia Aviation Corporation joined the China National Aviation Corporation, which is 45 per cent American-owned, in canceling service to the temporary capital because of last week's attack on a big C. N. A. C. passenger plane near Canton by Japanese fliers.

The air lines frankly were yielding to a Japanese threat that flights over the war area were at their own risk.

Foreign military attaches expected Hankow to fall to the Japanese within four or five weeks and foresaw a gradual disintegration in Chiang Kai-Shek's "All-China anti-Japanese Front" government when the generalissimo is forced to follow his ministers to Chungking, secondary provisional capital.

Americans Bar Alien Removal, Franco Reveals

By the United Press.

Burgos, Spain, Aug. 28.—Gen. Franco said tonight the presence of 12,000 Americans in the loyalist armies was partially responsible for his virtual rejection of the non-intervention "volunteers" withdrawal plan.

Franco issued the statement to foreign newspaper correspondents, in particular those representing the press of democratic countries, to explain the reasons underlying his negative reply to the volunteers evacuation scheme.

The statemetn was aimed chiefly at France and warned the French government against any precipitious action in opening the Pyrenees border for arms shipments to loyalist Spain.

France Suppresses Statement.

The French government banned publication of Franco's statement in France.

"The nonintervention agreement affects only half of the foreigners fighting in Red army, because it deals only with Europeans," Franco said. "The United States press recently admitted 12,000 American have joined the Red army."

He added that Americans and other foreign volunteers of the loyalist international brigades have suffered enormous casualties in six weeks of fighting along the Ebro Valley front on the western border of Catalonia, and many others have been taken prisoners.

Says Foreigners Saved Madrid.

"Fifty per cent of the prisoners and dead of the international brigade on the Ebro Front were non-Europeans," he said.

"I believe that numerous members of the non-intervention committee ignore this fact.

"The withdrawal of foreigners will not prejudice national Spain.

"Without the arrival of 40,000 members of the international brigade at Madrid the war would have been ended in November, 1936," he said.

By John R. Morris.
United Press Far East Manager.

Tokyo, Aug. 28.—The Japanese people are supremely confident they will win their war with China.

Tokyo, Yokohama, and other leading Japanese cities visited by this correspondent after a holiday in the United States from convering the Chinese-Japanese war on the Yangtze Valley front, show no signs of war strain.

And there is no indication of the "impending financial collapse of Japan," so much talked about while I was at home.

So confident, indeed, are the Japanese that they have started long-range plans for the development of North and Central China after the war is won.

Chinese Students Return.

Large sums of money already are being spent in North China development; scores of Chinese students are flocking back to the big universities of Tokyo to resume their studies; Chinese shopkeepers, tailors, barbers and merchants—of whom there long have been hundreds in Japan—are working peacefully as usual; and there is little surface indication that Education Minister en. Sadao Araki, fiery reformer, is getting far with his campaign to force Japanese youth back into the old ways rather then copying the news ways of America.

I lived in Japan for more than six years before going to China and I am, therefore, in a position to testify that life in the empire, despite the war in China, is proceeding under almost normal conditions.

Customs Relaxed.

The things which strike a wartime visitor to Japan are not the occasional reminders of the tremendous struggle on the continent but the fact that these reminders are so infrequent.

True, a Japanese cruiser stood off to starboard as the President Coolidge entered Yokohama Harbor but that was not uncommon since Yckohama is near one of Japan's greatest naval bases, Yokosuka.

Immigration and health officers passed passengers with even less red tape than in peace-time. My luggage was passed almost without examination although I had listed, as required, books which contained matter which easily may have been called Chinese propaganda.

My brief case was not even opened.

Ashore and outside the customs house the scene was equally normal. Shopkeepers were smiling happily because the Coolidge brought a large list of passengers including many U. S. Navy families new to the East and certain to be good customers.

The U. S. S. Marblehead was in the harbor to pick up mail for the U. S. Asiatic fleet.

The ride from Yokohama to Tokyo in a commuters' train was as uneventful as ever. At the door of Tokyo's famed Imperial Hotel, as urbane as ever, was the internationally known host—Inumeru.

Guests were sipping whisky and soda in the lobby as they have for years.

The nervous tension induced earlier this month by the possibility of Russian air raids was forgotten.

"What About the Yankees?"

Nobody even mentioned the possibility of a general conflcit with the U. S. S. R., and what Inumeru wanted to know, as he offered drinks to the house, was what teams will win the 1938 baseball championships in the United States.

Gasoline rationing, one of the publicized restrictions imposed since the war, appeared to have no effect on Tokyo's rundreds of taxicabs except to eliminate cruising for fares and thus lessen traffic congestion.

American films still are favorites, despite restrictions, and the first cinema I passed was featuring the late Jean Harlow in "Libeled Lady."

Army to Ask Alaska Air Base To Supplement Navy Defense

High Command Will Seek Roosevelt's Support for Appropriation From Next Congress; Disclosure Follows Johnson's Recent Return.

By the Associated Press.

The Army high command intends to ask President Roosevelt's active support for an appropriation by the next Congress to start work on an air base in Alaska.

The project would supplement defensive measures already undertaken or proposed by the Navy along the shortest route between America and the Orient.

A request for an initial appropriation for a $10,000,000 Army base was included in last year's War Department estimates, but was eliminated by the Budget Bureau in favor of needs considered more pressing. Subsequently, Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the House Military Affairs Committee, and Alaskan Delegate Anthony J. Dimond, made unsuccessful efforts to earmark Public Works funds for the purpose.

Disclosure that renewed efforts were contemplated follows return of Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, from an Alaskan aerial survey trip, on which he inspected possible air base sites and alternate routes for a 2,200-mile all-weather Seattle-Fairbanks road across British Columbia.

Congress in 1935 authorized establishment of an air base in Alaska "for training under conditions of extreme cold," but it appropriated no funds to carry out the authorization.

Discussion of possible sites has centered about Fairbanks, but officials are known to be interested in alternate sites.

Via Alaska and the Aleutians, the route across the Pacific is 1,400 miles shorter than via Hawaii, which the Army and Navy jointly have made a veritable Gibraltar in recent years.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said yesterday the United States would gladly reduce its armaments if other nations reduced theirs.

He gave this assurance in a letter sent to Col. John Callan O'Laughlin, publisher of the Army and Navy Journal, for publication in a seventy-fifth anniversary number of the Journal.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter:

"I congratulate you upon the completion by the Army and Navy Journal of 75 years of publication.

"Now, even as in the stirring days when your paper was established, the Federal Government has the inescapable obligation laid upon it by the Constitution to 'provide for the common defense.' That means not only the development of adequate military forces but the vigorous use of our good offices in the promotion of world peace.

"In pursuance of this constitutional duty, it has been our effort to place the Army and the Navy in a position to protect our territory and our vital interests. It has been our effort through treaties designed to remove trade barriers and irritations, through mediation, through disarmament negotiations, and through proper representations at critical moments, to lessen, and if possible, eliminate the factors that make for war.

"None of the things we have done contemplates aggression. None goes beyond what is essential to set up proper safeguards against aggression. As others decrease their armaments, we will gladly join them by reducing those which present world conditions force us to provide for our own protection."

Colonel Vanishes On Voyage Here

Lieut. Col. Edward G. McCormick, 50, until last November attached to the National Guard Bureau here, disappeared yesterday from the steamship Borinquen en route to New York from San Juan, Puerto Rico, according to the Associated Press.

The officer, who had left the bureau last year for duty with the Sixty-fifth Infantry in San Juan, was bound for Walter Reed Hospital for observation and treatment.

A native of New York, McCormick entered the Army as a major in June, 1918. He joined the National Guard Bureau here in 1934, following service with the Pennsylvania National Guard. While here he served as camp instructor and expert in target ranges.

The colonel was relieved of duty as C. M. T. C. officer in San Juan last Monday because of a nervous condition.

Career Broken, Drugs Self, Dies

Despondent because he was unable to find work as an accountant, Meline was found unconscious at his home last Monday by his wife, Mrs. Mabel Meline. He was sent to Gallinger Hospital two days later after receiving treatment by a private physician. Mrs. Meline said her husband had been driving a taxicab.

Get Excess Acid Out of Kidneys

But be sure and ask for and get a 35 cent box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—do not accept counterfeits.
